PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1870. Pringle Number of Conta

THE BILET HOUSE.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

The bell tells: evening and the bright star Drifting through groves of palms and plan tain fields, While is my hammock-hed I swing and

Not all a fream which sees the native rill, Which trickled of through boyhood's thirsty lips; The chestqui-tree, the fishes in the brook, And on the glassy bay, the white-winged

My boat on placid waves sleeps useless now Bank woods usurp the plats of green an yhere years ago I launched the baited line Or alept, betimes, upon the leafy bed.

The wearled heart now longs again to be Where happy hours, and sumy, joyot ays a, still on, to where the shadows fell drove me out to some and desert ways.

million to a late to to the state of No wife, no child: since these no longer

Yet forms so like stretch e'er the carpet ling steps upon the threshold nor raising only, never passing o'er.

widnight bells repeat a sad refrain, White swings my hammoch, and the wild winds rave.
The alient house, the shadows on the floor,
People the mists, and sit on every wave.
ENLIQUE PARMAR.

LEONIE'S MYSTERY.

WRITTEN FOR THE SAT ORDAY EVENING POST BY FRANK LEE BENEDICT.

AUTHOR OF "SAVED AT LAST," "THE COST OF A SECRET," "RACHEL HOLMES," ETC.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Loonie lived freer from the personation the apring than she had dared to hope ag to do. He did not attempt to appeared he with no threatening letterabled her with no threatening letterabled her with so threatening letterabled her with no threatening letterable was cortain that this quiet could how atterly his power was gove—wondered as herself therefor.

With a reckless defiance of anything that might uses, Leenis went about from one wasting-place to another, and wherever also place to another, and wherever also she revery tongue. Bhe fully believed Yakes would be apprended, her beauty and her compassed were the base of every tongue. Bhe fully believed Yakes would be apprended in the fifth that by your sex," also interrity face of the wind and over the given. "I am so accasts need to being reproached with that by your sex," also interrity face of the wind that by your sex," also interrity face of the wind that by your sex," also interrity face of the wind the part of the fifth and over one that he might kill him if your asse," it is never too late to atons—to act the wind that by your sex," also interrity face, and I don't think I care to step if its had over you that he might kill him if your asse," it is not a good sons, and I am age to be vexed when my wishes are the warten—but you will not care to hear about my private and spirits.

"I think not either," he replied; "but I could not help him there; he would be a could be a could not know."

"I think not either," he replied; "but I could not help him there; he would be a could not know."

"I think not either," he replied; "but I could not help him there; he would be a could not know."

"I think not either," he replied; "but I could not help him there; he would be a could not know."

"I think not either," he replied; "but I could not help him there; he would be a could not know."

"I think not either," he replied; "but I could not know."

"I think not either, be replied and at a low, and it as a low, and a low of the world is upposed in the sum of the could not a low of the world is upposed in the sum of the could not help him there; he could not know."

"I think not either, "he replied to the sum of the could not the could not know."

"I think not either, "he repl life came up, minting the said, with respectively and years with you for a moment Mra Dormer!"

""Thore have been many more fitting or portunities during the past week," she as plied, codly; "there can be no reason wi you should intrude upon me here."

"You have been constantly surround by friends," he continued, husby; "tand by friends," he continued, husby; "tand by friends," he continued, husby its she chan have a little fool;

"You have been constantly surreined by friends," he continued, husby, "and fiddh's want he expare mynelf to the chance of a robust—you see, I have a little foolish vanity to be burt yet."

The thought the humflity only assumed for the purpose of stinging her more sharply, and looked houghtier than ever.

"I understand," he said, with a sort of dreary smile, "that is nothing to you—there is no reason why it should be."

"Nome," she answered, out of the great kindness of her heart, finding it difficult to answer harshly while looking into his sortowful face, for all she tried to steel herself by thinking it only a bit of seeing.

"I loave Newport early in the morning," he went on, "and I could not go without speaking to you—I have waited several days on purpose to have an opportunity."

"I am at a loss to imagine what you can wish to say to me, Mr. Andrews; I certainly plainly showed you soon after my return Earl, that I had no desire to number you among my acquasitiones."

East, that I had no desire to number you among my acquaintaness."

"Xes," he easid; "I was very angry about it—now I think you wuis rightenough."

She looked beenly at him, trying to discover whether this was carnest, or whether in a moment, he would three off his mask and show her the face of a fresh enemy.

"You doubt me," he added; "that is natural eneugh—I doubt myself usually when any decent emotions are concerned, but I am truthful here."

"I am glad to know it," she answered, still on her guard; "such being the case, you will allow me, perhaps, to end this conversation."

you will allow me, permaps, to make your versation."

"Not just yet," returned he, hastily, yet with entire respect; "I think I can give you a reason for histening to me—it is something where Mark Lasley is interested."

Bhe was right; his humility had been assumed; he had sought her at the instance of Phing Yabs—it was another effort to surprise her into some admission where Lasley as concarned.

was concerned.

"You can have nothing to say of him or any other acquaintance, which could in the slightest degree interest me, sir," she said, half sising.

"You mistake my meaning, Mrs. Dormér," returned he, quickly; it was Mark Lasley who made me promise to see you before i went away."

She sat down again; her heart began to beat wildly, but she carefully guarded her manner still.

"Have you any message for me from Mr. Lasley," she saked.

"Not exactly that; I promised him to repeat to you scenyersation that we had."
"Go on, sir," she said, in a low, still wolce.

We gave some weeks ago a picture Hustrating the capture of a Cuttle Fish, and we give this week a companion picture in illustration of Shark-Sshing. For some remarks relative to the Shark see fourth page.

Somebow it all came out; I told bim how I had loved you—how I bated you, and he showed me sow mi-erably I behaved. At other mun feering as he did would have knocked me cown, but his know how sell! But he didn't doubt you had triffed with him. He raid he should have didn't doubt you —he did not believe that you had triffed with him. He raid he should know you were good and true if no axpiantal acult over he given."

But you never did, I can see new you didn't think of my leving you—it was only my foily. How could I suppose any comen show it all came out; I told him how I | say, Mrs. Dormer; you are not negry now at books of travel minutely descrit varied observs.

Alex Greeban was willing and down and real, for a season in a spot to recall me more as the regis think with unalfored entirefaction watering place to namether, and electronic measurements on the composition of the composi dashed over the cliff—looked up—and liftly as that it was Leecie Dormer.

- 30000

The gris full her heart cease beating; is was like couring face to face wish as will assemble to desiry that hell taken human clear to wash face with dashed to desire the dashed to the dashed to desire the dashed the dashed to desire the dashed the dashed the dashed the dashed to desire the dashed the das her!

But the very movement she made to obey her thoughts, so quick and impulsive, resulted to Loonie's mind the exectable girl of old days—she know her at once.

"Miss Crofton!" she exclaimed. "Burely it is Miss Crofton—not some trick my eyes me abring me!"

CHAPTER XXVII

When Milly beard Losnie Dormer's voice ber first impulse had been to hasten on wish-out a word, but Leonie came toward her building out her hand with as much friendli-ness as if their last meeting had no place in her mind.

bolding out her hand with as much friendlinees as if their last meeting had no place in her mind.

"He is really is you," she said laughing.

"How you stare at me—but no wonder; the idea of our meeting in this place! I am not quite certain yet that it is not your double—do speak and sell me you are not a ghost."

The same ringing laugh that had so voxed Milly's heart in the days goes by; the rame low, indelent voice that gave such peculiar grants to every word; what a torrent of recollections surged up on the sound and shock her very soul.

Men under such unpleasant circumstances are slow to think and act, unless in a case where a fullow man is comestred, and there is a shedow of pretext for knocking him down—but women's thoughts come and go like flashes of lightning.

This woman should not perceive that she had power to move her in any way, should not be able to result in the idea that Hilly had never recovered from the effects of the blow dealt by her hand. But Leonie's intention was very different; she had long since forgiven Milly's censity, and had sometimes feared that she might unconsciously have had a share in bringing about the trouble between her and Thorman.

"It is Mrs. Dormer," Milly said with delightful indifference. "No wonder you are entyrised to see me—I am less so. The place is so lovely that I am not astonished to see a fairy or any other beautiful creature start up."

"Ah, you have found voice—you are not see a fairy or any other beautiful creature start up."

"Ab, you have found voice—you are not a spirit," returned Mrs. Dormer, laughing; "and what a pretty greeting you give me—please shake hands."

But Milly was busy arranging her dress—it had been looped up over her blue petticoat, and some of the festoons had fallen down good-naturedly.

"I would with pleasure," said she, laughing as charmingly as Leonie herself, "but you see both hands are compled—imagine that American greeting done and over."

She did it so very well that anybody but this woman would have been deceived—she saw that Milly still hated her.

"The unforgiving little monster," she thought; "what did I ever do to her? But how lovely she has grown—what on earth has changed her so! There's a soul back of those eyes that has wakened—really, I must find out what it all means—who would have dreamed it!"

"You are too busy with your dress or too indifferent to he assurated." not done if her."

find out wase to be dreamed it!"

"You are too busy with your dress or too indifferent to be surprised," said she; "but I can't forego my woman's privilege! How came you here?—where did you come from?—do tell me,"

"How reason may prestries petticos," replied hilly, and laughed again.

"You wextitious creature!" cried she. "How came you in the village, then, since one must question estegorically?"

"Oh dear, yes—I beg your pardon—think of my being so stupid I did not understand! I really believe the all indigence of the swith."

Leonie had an internal conviction that Milly's, so far from being duiled, had been did cheedly sharpened by the sit or nome other cause. Bue had been the recipient of the ceolesse and raillery long enough—perhaps whe had better warn the young woman that the dailness had not deprived her of the recipient of the ceolesse and raillery long enough—perhaps whe had better warn the young woman that the dailness had not deprived her of her old."

"Ver; we can have the anticaction of believing that we are right till the last moment."

"Thank you; I object to last momente! Et bien, which path do you propose to take?"

"I am as much at a loss as you can be; I have taken so many turns, and climbed so may hills, that I can't tell my right hand from my left."

Leonie bad an internal conviction that Milly's, so far from being duiled, had been clief when the recipient of the ceolesse and raillery long enough—perhaps whe had better warn the young woman that the dailness had not deprived her of her old."

"Ver; we can have the anticaction of believing that we are right till the last moment."

"Thank you; I object to last moments!

"I am as much at a loss as you can be; I have taken so many turns, and climbed so many hills, that I can't tell my right hand from my left."

Leonie bagan to langh with the reckless-ness which was part of her nature.

"We shall have to imitate the school-boys," said she, picking up a little flat stone. "See—I toes this in the air—if the gray side comes uppermost, we try fate on the reckless-ness on the private had a loss as you can be; I have taken?"

"We shall have to imitate the chool-boys," and she, picking up a little flat stone. "Yet we hall have to imitate the chool-boys," and she, she had better warn the young woman that the dallness had not deprived her of her old the deliness had not deprived her of mer or dangerous weapons.

"Bo old a place to meet you," said she; "of source it must be a bridal trip—only lovers or misanthropes would come here—am I to congratulate you?"

"Only on the pleasure of meeting your-oalf," not flinching under the thrust which planted a wound that Leonie, ignorant of her own abare in Milly's tragedy, did not dream of inflicting.

"It is I who am to be congratulated, dear mademoiselle," said Leonie, growing very toucism and very languid.

randemoiselle," said Leonie, growing very foreign and very languid.

"Or else pitted," said Milly.

"How so, I beg ""

"Since you say the place could only be sought by lovers or missathropes," returned Milly, following up her encoess.

"Pas saul," said madam, laughing again.

"Oh, well, everybody knows that I am a missathrope, just a charming young blossom like yourself caunot make ench a plea."

"Oh, I came with my sunt, "replied Milly, "so the being in love or missathropic will fall to her cherge."

"Bow consfortable and convenient to have an aunt," said Leonie with the most delicate macer; "I wish I had one."

"Tes," Grawled Milly, withe whole volume of meaning in her voice; "I dare say you westel effect have found one a great convenience."

Leonic recollected on the instant Hand's story about the dinner party; the best wo-men is such an emounter will be mean—to other women.

other women.
"Tes," said she meditatively, "observa-tion has shown me they are not always a cufficient should for young women to hide behitd."

"Ob, I know nothing about that," an-wored Milty, a little too definitly; "I never ad occurion or felt institud to hild behind ay heigh."

awared Milly, a little had been up had occasion or full instinct up had awared had been a doubtful account of an instinct interruptory, that a make an institute interruptory, that a make the had been believed in the furnity had the

"It must be getting late," Milly said sud-denly, giancing at her watch, and a fare with a distance of a description of the distance of the dis or your difficulty—but I am not certain about being able."

"Cell!" cried Mrs. Dormer. "Well, maled, we shall at least have the consolation of being lest together."
"You will make me unwilling to find the way out if you remised me of that pleasure," aid Milly.

"You will make me unwilling to find the way out if you remind me of that pleasure," and Milly,

"Ah," said the other, "but we shall go together, too."

"Not if I know it," thought Milly; "I'll put her in the right puth and leave her—she makes me feel too wicked—the beautiful flond," But she did not express anything of her redection in words or voice, "I only hope we may be able to do m," she mid pleasurity. "I will go on to the top of this ciff—very likely I can see the village from there—don't come, for if I fall I should throw you hackwards."

Hrs. Dormer stood quietly mar the waterfall, waitshing Milly as she beauted up the rooks with a majed step, her stay having taught her to accept the most troublesoms places. She reached the top, and Louis nav her look eagerly about, then try several paths, and then she set down on a meany rook to wait, feeling theroughly tired by her unsumal wait.

Presently Milly returned, stepping slowly down over the rooks with what to mest people might have passed for undue contion in deceending the rugged path—but Louise with her quick perceptions interpreted the hesitation more correctly—she fance that Milly could not cedure being forced to rejoin her and have their conversation resurned.

"Wout a dreadful disposition she must Milly could not endure being forced to rejoin her and have their convercation recumed.

"What a dreadful disposition she must have," thought Leonia. "One would have thought she might have forgotten the most bitter hatred in all these months."

Just then she heard Milly speaking as she drew near the waterfall.

"I can see no sign of the village," she said; "It is very odd where we can be."

"Perhaps the place is enchanted and the genti are angry because we have come," returned Leonie, trying to laugh, but feeling greatly discomposed by Milly's words, for she and just discovered that she was thoroughly exhausted.

"The worst of it is," continued Milly, "there's a heavy cloud coming over South Mountain, mist or rain or both, so we must make haste in some direction."

Mrs. Dormer sprang up at once, "Yes have no idea which path would lead us least astray?" she maked.

"Not the alightest," replied Milly composedly. "Whether we had better go down the way I came up or go to the top of the cliffe and descend on the other side—the village lies in one direction or the other."

"How réassuring!" cried her companion.

"Yes; we can have the satisfaction of believing that we are right till the last moment."

"Thank you; I object to last moments!

"Very well; I warn you the path seemed very steep, as I looked over the edge." Mrs. Dormer shrugged her shoulders indif-ferently.

"One—two—now for luck or fate!"
Bhe tossed the pobble in the air; as it fell, both leaned over st—the yellow side rical, both leaned over st—the yellow side was apperment.

"We are doomed to try the cliff," said she, "I confess to being superstitions—I wouldn't bempt destiny by going the other way for the world."

She spoke haif in jest, half in earnest; Milly herself felt the same little superstitions feeling in favor of following the decision of their oracle, such as it was, which everybody has had, foolish as such things are, in moments of perplexity.

"So be it," she said. "We had better start—it is growing dusk, or that cloud is coming up very fast."

They clambered up the accent—Milly somewhat burthened with a plaid which she had brought on her arm to make a comfortable seat, and Leonie so weary that even the excitement of knowing they were lost could not make her forget her intense fatigue.

But of all people in the world, each felt could not make her ferget her intense fatique.

But of all people is the world, each felt that her companion was the last person to whom site would admit either weariness or fear—so they climbed on, laughing and justing, and being as witty and playful for each other's benefit, as if they had been in a ballroom with a crowd of men to listen to their how mote.

They were at the top of the cliff and stepped an instant to get breath and look out for some sign of the village.

Away in the west were broad streaks of dark red half covered with smoky flecks, but the mist or rain coming from the south had rushed up so rapidly, that is was like gazing out over a gray sea, and in the dim light the path at their feet looking fearfully precipitoes and uncertain.

Leonic gave one glasses and started back a think.

"Are you afraid?" saked Milly, with civil

"Are you afraid?" saked Milly, with civil

"Mot in the least; my head was disay for

"No indeed; that them by growing wileys,"

Be helped out of an empirementum, or it wileys is dispersed out of an empirementum, or it wileys to disperse by the growing Hope in the trape of the company of the being the property of the being the trape of the being the property of the being the trape of the being the trape of the being the property of the being the be denily, gianoing at her watch. "Why, it is after sumet!"

"And I fancy we are a long way from the village."

"Indeed, I don't quite know where we are; I was climbing the hill in hopes to get a look eat."

"I was in the same predicament," said Leonie; "I tried several paths, but sach seemed to lead me further artny than the one before it—I am very fortunate to have met you."

"She knew that would ver Milly, and it did.

"Fortunate, provided I can help you out of your difficulty—but I am not certain about being able."

"Call" orled Mrs. Dormer. "Well, ma began to be audible.

"Cau you see out at all?" Mrs. Dormer a.ked.

"Not in the least! I thought when we got here I should be able to form some idea of our whereabouts."

"But you can't?"

"No more than if we were in the moon." Leonic tried to laugh—made a mi-step—tried to eatch at a shrub fur support, but the twigs gave way in her hand, and she fell heavily upon the ground, unable to repress one sharp say of pain.

Milly was some distance in advance, pearing about among the shadows, but she heard the sound and called—

"You did not fail? You're not hurt?" There was no answer; she made her way heatily back to the spot, and found Madame trying to losses her drass from the bushes and got up.

"Oh, are you burt?" Milly asked, her anxiety at once round.

"I think not—I can't tell till I'm up—very awkward of ma—thank you," as Milly extrinsted her drass and helped her to rise.

But the instant she tried to etand, the pain forced a groon from her, and she would have fallen if Milly had not held her firmly.

"What is it—where are you hurt?"

firmly.

"What is it—where are you hurt?"

"My feet—".

"I don't think it is—the pain is in my feet. Let me aid down a minute—perhaps I have only bruised it against a stone."

Milly fouget her disfite to the woman—the wrongs the had received at her hands—everything except her asffering, and that ahe could see was excessive by the whiteness of Mrs. Dormer's face and the nervous clencying of her hands. Carefully as she could have touched a sister, Milly scated her on a convenient rock, and supported her in her arms.

"I think the pain will pass in a moment," Locale said, trying to keep her voice from trembling. "Don't let me tire you—I can sit up,"

"Lean against this tree, and let me loosen your foot," Milly said, for she new that the pain did not decrease.

In spite of her hasty deprecations, Milly knelt and unbuttoned the dainty kid dottine.

"Ah, that is easier—perhaps if I draw it partly off for a little it would get better."

Milly attempted to do so. Leonie farily shricked, then exclaimed, as Milly stopped in a fright—

"I beg your pardon—I didn't think I was in a fright—

"I beg your pardon—I didn't think I was such a baby! Let it alone—I can walk—I must walk."

must walk."

She struggled to her feet—tried to take a step and fell backward.

"I can't do is," she said, the horrible pain sending a deathly faintness over her;
"I must have broken some bone in my

"No, no-it would do no good! See now—you must not mind me—just leave me here and make the best of your way down." "Indeed I will not!"

"Indeed I will not!"
"You must come out somewhere—you an send somebody back for me."
"I shall not leave you, Mrs. Dormer—that

"Thes I shall walk if it kills me."
"Thes I shall walk if it kills me."
"You will do no such thing," returned Rilly firmly, restraining her as she tried to go on," Leonie said.

"I am not quite a brute," exclaimed Milly.
"Indeed, you are only too kind," returned she warmly. "But you see it can do no good to stay—I'm not in the least afraid—besides, you would be sure to find help some-" Leonie said.

where."
"I might land in the woods at the foot of South Mountain—quite as likely as anywhere."
"Honestly?"
"Honestly?"
"Honestly! I don't know which way to tare."

turn."
"Well, certainly there's no use filling the neighborhood with lost and distressed femaies—we may as well stay together and—"
A new and severer twinge of pain checked

"I must find a more comfortable place for you," Milly said, "and get your boot off— wait a moment."

wait a moment.

Bibe ran a little further down the descent and found herself in a sheltered glen; in the dim light she could see a waterfall dashing across the rocks before her—near by was a group of trees, under which she spread her plaid, then hurried back. In spite of Mrs. Dermer's expostulations, Milly half-carried her to the place, and after the first attempt to rest her foot on the ground, Leonie had emough to de to keep back the groan which the exquisite torture elicited. Supported by Milly, she managed to hobble on the other foot to the trees, and then nearly fainted.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE sweetest songs are those That few men ever hear And no men ever sing;

The clearest skies are those That farthest off appear To hirds of strongest wing;

The dearest loves are those That no man can come near
With his best fellowing.

EN In Paris a fat out is said no routh $1.30.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, Dec. 24, 1870.

The forms of THE POST are the same as these of that beautiful magnetice, THE LADYS FRIEND—to eries that the clubs may be made up of the paper and magnetice conjointly when so desired—and are as follows:—One copy (and a large Framium Steel Engraving) $3.50; Two copies $4.00; Four copies $6.00; Five copies (and one extra) $5.00; Eight copies (and one extra) $12.00. One copy of THE POST and one of THE LADYS PRIEND, $4.00. Every person getting up a club will receive the Premium Engraving in addition.

graving in addition. minn Regraving must send one deller entre. To those who are not subscribers we will furnish it for two dellers.

Subscribers in the British Provinces must remit twenty cents extra fer poetage. Papers in a club will be sent to different post-offices if desired. Contents of Post and of Lady's Priend always entirely different. Subscribers, in order to save themselves from loss, should, if possible, procure a Postoffice order on Philadelphia; or get a draft on Philadelphia or New York, payable to our order. If a draft cannot be had, send a check payable to our order on a National Bank; if even this is not procurable, send United States notes and register the letter. Do not send money by the Express Com-panies, unless you pay their charges. Always be sure to name your Post-office, County, SEWING MACHINE Premium. For 30 subscribers at $3,50 apisce—or for 20 sub-scribers and $60—we will send Grover & Baker's No. 25 Machine, price $55. By re-mitting the difference of price in cash, any higher priced Machine will be sent. Every riber in a Premium List, inasmuch as he pays $3.50, will get the Premium Steel Engraving. The lists may be made up con-jointly, if desired, of THE POST and the LADY'S FRIEND.

Samples of THE POST will be sent for ! ents of the Ludy's Friend for 10 cents. amples of both will be sent free to those desirous of getting up olubs.

Addre HENRY PETERSON & CO., 319 Walnut St., Philadelphia

THE LADY'S PRIESD.

With the January number of this " Queen of the Monthlies," a new and, as the ladies

By an arrangement made with a celebra ted Pattern House in New York, accurate patterns of nearly all the designs for suits, dec., in the Magasine, can be furnished at very low prices. These patterns are be-lieved to be superior to all others in the market, for the case with which the ladies of every family can understand and use them. Many of what are called patterns, the ladies tell us, are utterly useless to any but a professional seamstress—but these are available for common household work and ingenuity.

The ability to furnish such cheap and admirable patterns to its readers, gives "THE LADY'S FRIEND," we think, a superjority over all its competitors. It will enable the ladies to save the cost of the magazine many times over in the course of the yearand make it thus a matter of positive economy to subscribe for it. The LADY'S PRIEND is still furnished with THE POST. See Terms.

OUR LETTERS.

Our letters renewing subscriptions come rise. "It would be the wisest thing for you to to us as usual at this season of the year, freighted with complimentary allusions to THE POST and THE LADY'S PRIEND. Of course we cannot pretend to give all that is said-but we may note the following from ast week's letters :-

J. H. T., of Lexington, Virginia, says:-"We regard THE POST as one of the best papers published."

T. A. J., of Rushville, Indiana, says:-"I find it less trouble each year to get up a Club, as your paper and magazine be-come better known. It is impossible for us to do without them."

"I seemed give up such dear frien

Mar S. R. R. of Pennson, Na "How any one can word a single wo of TEE POST, and tay no when as on bearing, is story than I can understood

Mrs. J. E. W., of 1

MYS:-

"Your paper is the best of the weaklies in the opinion of all your old subscribes here, myself izeluded."

Page III Darring.—A deepsich in the Times, dated Berlin, December 14, states that the supply of gas is Paris has given out, and the city after sundown is in total darkness. The confusion consequent on this adds very manifestly to the houses of the war. The darkness is favorable to the desertion of the besieged, and detachments of French soldiers are stationed at all outlets of the city to step deserters.

With the surrender of Monimady, 65 cannon and 8,000 priseners fell into the bands of the Germans, and 295 German prisoners were released.

Proofs of the Pressian scheme for the restoration of the French Empire come from every quarter. Bismarck case this is the only way the war can end; that republican France will fight forever; that the full of Paris can produce no effect; that the suly course is to make terms with the Empire and go home, and leave the Fresch to fight it out between themselves.

BISMARCK AS A DUKE,—Wolff telegraphs from Berlin on the 14th that Bismarck is to be Duke of Strasbourg, but Bismarck wants to retain his own nems.

BEBLIN, Dec. 14.—The Provincial Correspondence of this morning, in an article on the progress of the war, stys that the proposed bombardment of Paris has again been postponed, because such a course at present would be detrimental to the military operations. The real object of the war and the intersets of the army at this juncture are of paramount consideration; and unquestionally, at the right moment, the commander of the investing army will take such action as word. The results and future success.

Paris letters of the 5th announce the city of the sure and the intersets of the army at this juncture are of paramount consideration; and unquestionally, at the right moment, the commander of the investing army will take such action as will fully insure immediate and future success.

of the investing army will take such action as will fully insure immediate and future success.

Paris letters of the 9th announce the situation as good. The repulse of the army of the Loire and the recapture of Orleans have not discouraged the Parisians. There is a general demand for more sorties and a universal approval of the answer sent by Gen. Trochu to Gen. Moltke, and the people all say they will resist to the last.

The measures taken by the government since the commencement of the siege are accepted willingly by the population. Having insured itrelf against waste of provisions, of which there are enough to last until February, the government will again issue fresh meat rations to the inhabitants. Other provisions are sufficient to last six mombs.

MADRID, Dec. 15.—It is said one of the first acts of King Amadeus, of Spaie, will be to give one-half of the appanage of the Grown, amounting to some twenty millions of doilars, to the Treasury.

The Times of the 15th, in an editorial on the Luxembourg question, says it is not lingland's duty alone to resist the absorption of Luxembourg by Prusia, and thinks that perhaps Prussia may be satisfied with that acquisition and forego the taking of Lorraine from France. A Cabinet council will be held to-day, which is expected to define the attitude of England.

King William, of Holland, has telegraphed to the Government of Luxembourg, that he will defend the treaty of 1867, and the honor and independence of the Duchy. He also approves the acts of the Government of Luxembourg.

A deepatch to the Times, dated Versailles 15, says the Luxembourg question will produce no complications here. Her independence is preserved unless she openly supports France.

King William Affinite Popp.—Low-pop Des 16.—W. Tandien telegraphs on ports France.

KING WILLIAM AND THE POPE.—LORDON, Dec. 16.—Mr. Taudien telegraphs on the 15th, that the Papal Buvoy, M. Kegman, arrived at Vermilles on the 15th inst., with important deepatehes from the Pope to Bismarck and the King. It is certain the King premised the Pope to restore to him his temporal news as soon as the present way.

imporal power as soon as the present war ends. The official journal, the Helk; states that the King has also determined to resions Rapoleon.

FLORENCE, Dec. 18.—In the Italian Parliament to day, Senor Leon made a powerful rpoech in support of the bill relative to the guarantees to be given to the Pope. He said the Catholic world demanded every guarantee which it was possible for Italy to concode.

A bill for the consideration of Papal debts

To Sake Cloth Water-pi

"I man it less troube each year to get up a Club, as your paper and magazine become better known. It is impossible for us to do without them."

Mira L. C. F., of Canton, Illinois, says:—

"I think I cannot do without The Poer and The Lady's Freezo—and shall take them as long as I live."

Miss S. Mon., of Moorefield, West Virginia, says:—

"I have been thinking I ought to take but one of them next year—but after trying for weeks to make up my mind which to give up, I have come to the conclusious that I cannot possibly do without both the paper and the magazina."

M. M., of Gwynedd, Pennsylvania, in renewing her subcoription, writes:—

"I could not possibly relinquish so old and cherished a feited as The Poer, for it has been received with pleasure in my home for nearly 40 years."

Mrs. A. J. B., of Bleomingsburg, Indiana, says:—

"We have taken your paper the last year, and we are very much pleased with it. I send you a Club of five subcribers, all new ones."

J. L. B., of Klimstrock, Pennsylvania, asys:—

"I mannet rive us such deer friends on the send them what we know as water-proces."

The first vertice in an Reglish journal says:—

"By-the-way, touching water-proofs, I think I can give travellers a valuable hint or two. By-the rays and they water-proof; but I will buy no more, for I have learned that good Scottish tweet can be water cored; I have learned that good Scottish tweet can be made to make it so; and for the benefit of my readers, I will have learned that good Scottish tweet rain, and, moreover, I have learned that good Scottish tweet water, poor lead of separation in the water, poor lead of separation in the water, poor for its province that the pound of separation in the water proof is at I will buy no more, for I have learned that yet be recipe:

"I a spill of coft water, put half a pound of separation in the water poor for leading the pound of separation in the water poor for many years I have water proof; is at I will buy no more, for I have learned that yet be recipe:

"I a spill of coft wate

The dest velves factory in the United States has just been started in Kamen.

DOWN A WELL.

AN INCIDENT OF THE WAR.

In a little willage near Bessilies, before the fall of Sedan and the eccapation of the surrounding country by the Premians, a party of Econovas caught sight of a young officer of Huseness, who had vantured alone upon a daring recompaissance, in advance of his party. They instantly gave chaos. Our Husener dashed away; but two or three light-heeled French soldiers rapidly ascended a piece of rising ground, and were able to bring down his horse with the far-ranging bullets of the Chassepot. The Husenr was presently made prisoner; and as he spoke Franch and complimented his captors in a jordiar vein on their skill and colority, the Zouaves at once became very friendly—gave him some wine and a sigar to smake while they searched him. The only things they found in his peckets were a lutch pipe, an empty tokacco pouch, an old knife, and a term letter. Of course, none of the French knew a word of German, and were still less likely to desighter a word in the German handwriting; but, thinking it might contain something worth knowing, they ordiered their prisoner to translate it for them—first making him go down upon his knees, and swear, upon his known, to give them a faithful translation. He explained that the letter was from a brother officer in one of the new regiments, which had not yet been engaged; and that the part torn off had been for his pipe. He then read what remianed:—

"The wagons with our rations are on the way, but we find them very slow. This is altogether a very hungry business. It began with hunger of the French for our lovely Rhime—" comply tachence possib, an eld knife, and a torn, father. Of course, same of the French knew a word of German, and were still less likely to desigher a word in the German handwriting; but, thinking it might contains a model for its elegant maning; and claims likely to desigher a word in the German handwriting; but, thinking it might contains a model for its elegant maning; and claims likely to desigher a word in the German handwriting; but, thinking it might contains a model for its elegant maning; and claims likely to design king him of down upon his knees, and swerg a translation. His explained that the head of the new regiments, which had not yet been engaged and that the part form of had been for him to be the same and the part form of had been for him to be the same and the part form of had been for him to be the same and the prisoners soloped; in the way, but we find them very alow. This is altique that a very haupy beauteses. It bears with bunger of the French for our lovel; fline—"

Home excertations burnt from his anciliers, and the prisoners slopped; but was instanty and lines, but for its words and him to be in really not surprising, because they once possessed it, and know what a beautiful country it is. But we all sweather with fluxes and lines, but for its words which we supposed.

At first this cloth was made of this and lines, and the prisoners knowled it is an interest to be informed if the word from the health of the levely river. In the real words and the prisoners was the lines, and the prisoners was the lines and the lines was the lines and lines, and excellent the lines and lines, and the lines was the lines and lines, and excellent the lines and lines, and excellent the lines and lines, but for the lines and lines, and the lines and lines, but for the lines and lines, and the lines and lines, but for the lines and lines, but for the lines and lines, but for the lines and lines, and the lines

"What do you think of old Trop-ohou (too much cobbage?")

Their great commander of Paris (Trochu) being thus designated as too much of an old cabbage?

Some of the Zonaves were for bayoneting or shooting their prisoner upon the spot. In vain the Hussar endeavored to make them not made the offensive jest. It was a letter written is, and not by him. His earraged captors said they could not enter into any of these fine distinctions, and he should therefore be shot as a spy!

It appears that this very legical verdiet would have led to the speedy execution of the luckless Hussar; but that one of the store had vanished from the dinarcom, and the greates in the large pasiors were closed.

House cleaning had been accomplished, and the store had vanished from the dinarcom, and the greate in the large pasiors were closed.

The ladies were shivering in their thick silks and spring alpaces; and we, thought to be of hardler make, found on heavy broad-hand, because he had received and had not wristen the letter. This intropolities and spring alpaces; and we, thought was no danger; she was used to it. I heard the probabment of the bullet or the bayonet was communed by a proposal to lower the Hussar into a well.

Hussar into a well.

(S)(S)(S)

8

be off, before the officer of the night watch

got sight of him.

After the grave apperphal manifests of the Emparer Napoless—not to speak of many of the telegrams—one does not know what to believe. We may doubt the authoriticity of the above story; but, certainly, there is nothing in it at all improbable.

The Origin of Names.

We understand why certain fabrits are known as silk, lines, cotton, and woollen; as these clothes all take their name from the material of which they are manufactured.

But it may not be quite so clear to the young lady why her dainly ruffles are cambrio, and only her cotton dresses are called calloo or musiis. Nor to the bounet-maker why laces, flowers, ribboen, etc., should be millinery, and herself a milliner.

Cambrio, both lines and cotton, was first manufactured in Cambray, hence its name. Calicot takes its name from Calicot, a place in India. Moussel, a city in Turkey, was noted for its elegant musius; and claims the invention of that species of cotton goods.

THE VICTORY OF THE VARQUISMED. A Biory of the First Century. By the author of the "Carsainles of the Schonberg-Costa Funily," etc., etc. Published by Dodd & Mead, 762 Broadway, New York; and also for sale by Perter & Contee, Philade.

THE YMLLOW MASK. A Novel. By WILKIE COLLINA, author of "The Woman in White," etc. Published by T. R. Piberson & Bros., Philade.

THE ADVARTIMEN'S HAND-BOOK: Comprising a Complete List of all Newspapers, Periodicals and Marsaines published in the United Brates and British Possessions. Arranged by Counties, with the population of Counties and Towns, separate lists of the Daily, Religious and Agricultural Newspapers, and a history of the Newspaper Press.
Published by S. M. Fettengil & Co., Newspaper Adv. Agents, 37 Park Row, New York.

THE ATLANTIC MONTREY for January,
1871. Contains "A Year in a Venetian
Palace," "The Pagitive," "Miss Moggartidge's Provider," "The Valley of Gastein," "Madam Delia's Expectations," "Castillian Days," "Our Eyes, and how to take care of them," "The Bistury," "Dovotby Q," and other articles and poems. Published by Fields, Oegood & Co., Boston.

THE CRRISTMAS NUMBER OF THE AMERICAN LITERARY GARETTE AND PUBLISHERS' CINCULAR. A Complete List of Illustrated and other Books, suitable for Presentation
and Rewards. Published by George W.
Childs, Philads. It is almost as good as having the books themselves to isok ever these tempting notices and beautiful illustrations.

PUNCHINELLO. Published by the Punchiselio Publishing Co., New York, Full of some funny and some not very funny things,
as usual. On the whole, pretty good.

How They Bathe at Venice. BY W. D. HOWHLLS.

liere I am reminded of another pleasure of modern dwellers in Venetian palaces, which could hardly have been indulged in by the patricians of old, and which is hardly imaginable by people of this day, wheee from doors open upon dry land. I mean to say the privilege of cen-bathing from can's own threshold. From the buginning of June till far into fleptumber all the campititions hoys, who elemen shout in the brine, or point themselves for a leap from the tope of bridges, or show their flue, statusceque figures, bround by the ardent can, spaints the facades of empty painces, where they have among the marble solutions, and meditate a headlong plungs. It is only the Venetian ladies, in fact, who do not share this healthful amusement. Fathers of families, like so many plung, demestic drakes, lead forth their squatic broods, teaching the little ones to swim by the sid of various floats, and delighting in the gambols of the larger ducklings. When the tide comes is fresh and strong from the sea the water in the Grand Canal is pure and refreshing; and at these times is is a singular pleasure to leap from one's door-skep into the awift current, and apand a half-hour, very informally, among one a neighborn there. The Venetian bathing-dress is a more ekseth of the puntaloons of ordinary life; and when I used to stand upon our baloony, and see some bearded head ducking me a poile salutation from a pair of broad, brown shoulders that showed above the water, I was not always able to recognise my acquaintance, deprived of his facilitious identity of clothes. But I always knew a certain shately consul-general hy a vast expanse of haldness upon the top of his facilitious identity of clothes. But I always knew a certain shately consul-general hy a vast expanse of haldness upon the top of his facilitious identity of clothes, and the hop of his head; and it must be owned, I think, that this form of social assembly was, with all its disadvantages, a novel and vigacious speciacie. The Venetian ladies, when they bathed, wont to the Lid him has a minuse hindle in his complexified for form that a minuse flower has plant beyond.

He has he first a first the special posture by plant beyond.

He has he first a first the special posture by the special posture of the hashes flow of the first that in the special posture, in the special posture of the hashes flow of the special posture of the hashes flow of the special posture Bagtish Fruits and Vegetables.

Are the fruits and vegetables really so poor and meagre in Eagland. Hawtherne complained that no Eaglish fruit equalied in flavor a home-grown turnipt. Other Americans testify to the small supply—the lack of variety. A friend, who lived some time in lodgings in London, say they grew very tired of their day-after-day canliflewer and potatose. (Turnips had been reled out from the first.) Finally she appealed desparsiely to the cook, when she same one merning, as usual, for instructions: "But cannot we have some other vegetable? Is there really nothing to be found but potatoon and canliflower?" Cook considered deeply for a moment, them emerged with the triumphant

A Working Butt for Farmore.

Farmers and mechanics need some hind of a substantial working dress—one that is changly made and easily put on and comfostably wore. It is very expensive working in a good suit of elothes and expected them to the various kinds of laber incident to farm life. Put on a pair of new pasts and get into an apple tree to trim or graft it, or go to repairing feaces and you will be sues to make a rest in them before they are a day o'd. Such a thing garely happens to an oid pair. We invented a dress several years since which we have used and recommended to others much to their satisfaction. It is a sleeve west closed in front, and trowsers in one place, with only one factoring with a strap behind the neck. The clove may be made sufficiently large enough to wear over a cont. The material should be of blue drilling.

Thus at a triffing expenses a man can be made sufficiently large enough to wear ever a cont. The material should be of blue drilling.

Thus at a trifling expense a man can be readily fitted to grapple with any kind of work without a constant fear of tearing or soiling his clothen, while the cost in not contently part of a suit of orelizary clothing. It will often be found convenient to wear in hot weather without any other clothing than a shirt. Any clever househeeper who can make a pair of summer pants, can make one of these most useful articles. The chy difficulty usually is not buying cloth enough to have them made sufficiently large. The suit should be large enough to wear over other garmonic, if necessary, and when the day's work is done it may be removed, others substituted, and the farmer is in complete trim to cit down of an evening dressed in clean clother and ready to engage in conversation, reading, or any other ammenment suited to a sational and intelligent mind. The cost of such a suit is trifling, and is more than made up by what it serves of other clothes.—Maine Parmer.

other clothes. — Medice Former.

Conscience Breaming.

One of the possiliarities of my dreams is, that I am never absorbed in them suitedly. I never lose the conviction that I am dreaming, and whatever visionancy termines beful me, I know that they will come to a specify und—a comfortable assurance, since my dreams are almost invariably bed. If I am helly purshed by a wild beast or as irresistible foe, I throw myself, as I shpoon, as the ground, and covering my face with my hands, by a violent estion of the will, farce myself into wakefulnes.

I will give a curious instance of my peculiarity in this respect. In the source of one of my dreams, I was brought as a captive mto the greennes of some Algerian despet, who san on a throne, with a numerous bedy of notidiers on such side of him, and who measued me with horrible teriures. Histened patiently, and when his discourse was ended, I said with perfect caluments:

"This is very well now; but you are perfectly aware that when I open my eyes, you and your soldiers will all go to the..."

Evidently the mail had been hit on the head. The soldiers nudged cost other, and unasally exchanged significant wishs, indicating that I had discovered the score of nothinguess. The soliton or day (whichever he was) looked crustfalies, but put on as good a face as he could, and said with avident reluctance; "Well, you may go." I left the spot with the utenest incolence, amapping my fingers at the soldiers, who, as I passed them, stared at me with the most incone expression of awa. Soon afterwards I awake.—Confeccion of a Dreamer.

THE CHIMES.—It is reported that a Chinese Immigration Agency has been established in New York, and that contracts have already been extended in the contracts have already been extended in the contracts have already been extended in the comply extend hundred Chinese laborers for prominent manufacturers in New England and the Middle States. The inhorers are supplied in any number from ten upwards, under contracts to serve for two and three years, for $35 gold par month, and a suitable beliefing for them to jook, est, and alsesp in. The employers are to supply the tools suitable for the trade at which the Chinese are to be employed, and are to allow Sandays and two holidays in addition in each year. The mea engaged to work ten hours a day.

MEAGURET BRADEN.

TRONG, PURE AND BICH BLOOD, INCREASE OF PLESE AND WESORT, CLEAR SKIN AND BRAUTIPUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL,

RADWAY'S BARRAPARTELIAN RESOLVERT EAS NADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURBS. SO QUICE, SO RAPID AND THE

UNDER THE INPLUENCE OF THE TRULY WONDERPUL MEDICINE. THAT EVERY DAY AN INCREASE IN PLESS AND WEIGHT IS SHEN AND FELT.

landslar Discove, Ulucra in the Threat and Mouth,
Tumora, Nodes in the Chands,
And other parts of the system,
Serv Eyes,
Dirumons discover of the Ryes, Nose, Mouth,

And the worst forms of Skin Diseas Eruptions, Fever Serves, Sould Send, Ring Worse, Salt Rhouse, Bryslpoins, Arms, Black Spots, Worms in the Flenk, Tunners, Cuncers in the Womb, and all Ridney, Staddon, Utlaney and

Fomb Discasse, Gravel, Disbelies, Deopoy, Suspage of Water, Incontinuous of Urins, Bright's Discass,
Washington and Pularius Electropes, Hight Stream,
Ase within the constitute rouge of

RADWAYS SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease, its potent power

ONE DOLLAR A BOTTLE Principal office of Maldon Late, New York, Sold by Draggion.

Hostetler's United States Almunes for 1971, for distribution, profit, throughout the United States, and all civilized countries of the Wortern House, place, will be published about the first of January, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of a great variety of discourse, it embraces a large emeant of information interesting to the merchant, the mechania, the minor, the farmer, the planter, and protessional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as one most exhibite for a correct and compenhance Ma-PROMAL CALBEDAR.

The nature, uses, and entracerdinary contings of fects of HOWTETTER'S STOMACE RETEXED AND STOMACE RETEXED AND STOMACE RETEXED AND STOMACE RETEXED. THE STOMACE RETEXED AND STOMACE RETEXED AND STOMACE AND STOMACE RETEXED AND STOMACE RESERVED AND STOMACE RESERVED

north in

A Young Wife's Moquest.

Wife-Charler, I wish when you come up to-night you'd ctop into your druggint's and gat no a bettle of Planearson Servense. Be rure to get the penulae, Charley—What in the world, Mary, are you going dashed over the cliff—looked up—and Milly are that it was Leonic Dormer.

SCAR

The girl felt her heart cease beating of the was like coming face to face with an evil destiny that hal taken human above he work. She will include more me househofter overall instance—and only since looking full in the woman's face with a remailier of her overall instance—and only since looking full in the woman's face with a remailier of absolute dreed.

At the first glames Leonic's short sight did not reagnise Milly in the elemnic sight did not reagnise Milly in the elemnic had not sight did not reagnise. Milly in the elemnic sight did not reagnise Milly in the elemnic had not sight did not reagnise. Milly in the elemnic had not sight did not reagnise Milly in the elemnic had not sight did not reagnise. Milly sheet one which she had hoove as so chilaichly pretty. Seeing her gase returned with that perplayed expression one wears when trying to recall a countenance, Milly felt that ahe was usereoughed—if also could get away before too creature had time to remember or address her!

But the war more ment abe made to short.

But the very movement she made to obey her thoughts, so quick and impulsive, te-old days—she knew her at once.

'Mise Crofton !" she exclaimed. "Burely it is Mise Crofton—not some trick my eyes are playing me!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

When Milly heard Losnis Dormer's voice her first impulse had been to hasten on with-out a word, but Leonie came toward he-holding out her hand with as much friendi-ness as if their last meeting had no place in her mind.

"How you stare at me—but no wonder; the idea of our meeting in this place! I am not quite certain yet that it is not your double—do speak and tell me you are not a ghost."

The same ringing laugh that had so vexed Milly's heart in the days gone by; the rame low, indolent voice that gave such peculiar grace to every word; what a torrest of recollections surged up on the sound and shock her very and.

grace to every word; what a torrent of recollections surged up on the sound and shook her very soul.

Hen under such unpleasant circumstances are slow to think and act, unless in a case where a fellow man is concerned, and there is a shedow of pretext for knocking him down—but wemen's thoughts come and go like flashes of lightning.

This woman should not perceive that she had never to more her in any way, should

This woman should not perceive that she had power to move her in any way, should not be able to cruit in the idea that Milly had never recovered from the effects of the blow dealt by her hand. But Leonie's latention was very different; she had long since forgives Milly's cruelty, and had sometimes feared that she might unconsciously have had a share in bringing about the trouble between her and Thorman.

"It is Mrs. Dormer," Milly said with delightful indifference. "No wonder you are surprised to see me—I am less so. The place is so lovely that I am not astonished to see a fairy or any other beautiful creature ee a fairy or any other beautiful creature

"Ab, you have found voice—you are not spirit," returned Mrs. Dormer, laughing; an I what a pretty greeting you give me— lease shake hands."

"an I what a pretty greeting you give me—please shake hands."

But Milly was busy arranging her dress—it had been looped up over her blue petticoat, and some of the festoons had fallen down good-naturedly.

"I would with pleasure," said she, laughing as charmingly as Leonie herself, "but you see both hands are occupied—imagine that American greeting done and over."

She did it so very well that anybody but this woman would have been deceived—she eaw that Milly till hated her.

"The unforgiving little monster," she thought; "what did I ever do to her? But how lovely she has grown—what on earth has changed her so! There's a soul back of those eyes that has wakened—really, I must find out what it all means—who would have dreamed it !"

"You are too busy with your dress or too and out what it all means—who would have dreamed is!"

"You are too busy with your dress or too indifferent to be surprised," said she; "but I can't forego my woman's privilege! How came you here?—where did you come from?—do tell me."

"Up the hill—from the village—and I have torn my prettiest petticoat," replied Milly, and laughed again.

Mrs. Dormer was vexed, but she enjoyed a bit of high comedy well performed, and she could not help laughing too.

"You vexitious creature!" cried she. "How came you in the village, then, since one must question categorically?"

"Oh dear, yes—I beg your pardon—think of my being se stupid I did not understand! I really believe the air of these quiet places dulls one's with."

dulis one's wits."
Lecuie had an internal conviction that Milly's, so far from being dulled, had been decidealy sharpened by the air or some other cause. She had been the recipient of the she had better warn the young woman that the dallness had not deprived her of her old the dallness had not deprived her of her old dangerous weapons.

"So old a place to meet you," said she; "of course it must be a bridal trip—only lovers or misanthropes would come here—am I to congratulate you?"

"Ouly on the Pleasure of meeting your-self," not flinching under the thrust which planted a wound that Leonie, ignorant of her own share in Milly's tragedy, did not dream of inflicting.
"It is I who am to be congratulated, dear dream of inflicting.

"It is I who am to be congratulated, dear mademoicelle," said Leonie, growing very foreign and very languid.
"Or else pitted," said Milly.
"How so, I beg y"

"How so, I beg v"

"Since you say the place could only be rought by lovers or misanthropes," returned Milly, following up her encoust.

"Pas mal," said madam, laughing again.

"Oh, well, everybody knows that I am a misanthrope, but a charming young blossom like yourself caunot make snot a plea."

"Oh, I came with my aunt, "replied Milly, "othe being in love or misanthropic will fall to her charge."

"How constructed and convenient to have an aunt," said Leonie with the most delicate sneer; "I wish I had one."

"Yes," drawled Miffy, witha whole volume of meaning in her voice; "I dare say you would often have found one a great convenience."

Leonie recellected on the justant Mand's about the dinner party; the best wo-mes.

"said she meditatively, "observa-shown the they are not always a sheld for young women to hide behitd."

"Ob, I know nothing about that," anowered Milly, a little too definitly; "I never had occasion or felt inclined to hide behind had occarion or run anybody."

"Ke," said Mrs. Bormer, in a voice so misely balanced between a doubtful amount and an insolut interrogalory, that a men would have believed is the farmer, but the a little. "Are you afraid?" asked Milly, with civil

" And I fancy we are a long way from the village."
"Judeed, I don't quite know where we are; I was climbing the hill in hopes to get a look out."

"I was in the same predicament," said Leonie; "I tried several paths, but each seemed to lead me further astray than the one before is—I am very fortunate to have meet you." Leonle

She knew that would ver Milly, and it did.

"Fortunate, provided I can help you out of your difficulty—but I am not certain about being able."

"Cell." cried Mrs. Dormer. "Well, makelle."

belle, we shall at least have the consolation of being lest together."

'You will make me unwilling to find the way out if you remind me of that pleasure," and Milly.

'Ah," said the other, "but we shall go together, too."

"Ah," and the vener, together, too."
"Not if I know it," thought Milly; "I'll put her in the right path and leave her—she makes me feel too wicked—the beautiful fiend." But she did not express anything of her reflection in words or voice, "Lonly and the reflection in words or voice."

makes me rest too wicked—the breaking flond." But she did not express anything of her reflection in words or voice. "I only hope we may be able to do so," she mid pleanastly. "I will go on to the top of this cliff—very likely I can see the village from there—don't come, for if I fail I should throw yen backwards."

Mrs. Dormer stood quietly near the waterfall, watching Milly as she bounded up the rocks with a rapid step, her stay having taught her to ascend the most troublecome places. She reached the top, and Leonic saw har look eagerly about, then try several paths, and then she sat down on a messy rock to wait, feeling thoroughly tired by her unusual walk.

Precently Milly returned, stepping slowly down over the rocks with what to mest people might have passed for undue caution in descending the rugged path—but Leonic with her quick perceptions interpreted the heitation more correctly—she knew that Milly could not endure being forced to rejoin her and have their conversation abe must."

join her and nave town convenience of sumed.

"What a dreadful disposition she must have," thought Leonia. "One would have thought she might have forgotten the most bitter hatred in all these months."

Just then she heard Milly speaking as she drew near the waterfall.

"I can see no sign of the village," she said; "It is very odd where wa can be."

"Perbapa the place is enchanted and the genii are angry because we have come," returned Leonie, trying to laugh, but feeling greatly discomposed by Milly's words, for she had just discovered that she was thoroughly exhausted.

"The worst of it is."

exhausted.
"The worst of it is," continued Milly,
"there's a heavy cloud coming over South Mountain, mist or rain or both, so we must make haste in some direction."

make haste in some direction."

Mrs. Dormer sprang up at once.

"You have no idea which path would lead us least serray?" she asked.

"Not the alightest," replied Milly composedly. "Whether we had better go down the way I came up or go to the top of the cliffs and descend on the other side—the village lies in one direction or the other."

"How reassuring!" cried her companion.

"Yes; we can have the satisfaction of believing that we are right till the last mo-

"Yes; we can have the satisfaction to Yes; we can have the satisfaction believing that we are right till the last mo ment."

"Thank you; I object to last moments!
EA bien, which path do you propose to take?"

take?"
"I am as much at a loss as you can be; I have taken so many turns, and climbed so many hills, that I can't tell my right hand from my left."

Leonie began to laugh with the recklessness which was part of her nature.
"We shall have to imitate the school-boys," said she, picking up a little flat stone. "See—I toes this in the air—if the gray aide comes uppermost, we go back the way you came; if the yellow, we try fate on the other side of the cliff."

"Yery well; i warn you the path seemed very steep, as I looked over the edge." Mrs. Dormer shrugged her shoulders indif-ferently.

"One—two—now for luck or fate!" She tossed the pebble in the air; as it fell, both leaned over st—the yellow side was uppermost.

"We are doomed to try the cliff," said she. "I confess to being superstitions—I she. "I confess to being superstition—I wouldn't tempt destiny by going the other way for the world."

She spoke haif in jest, half in carnest;

way for the world."

She spoke haif in jest, half in earnest; Mily herself fult the same little superstitions feeling in favor of following the decision of their oracle, such as it was, which everybody has had, foolish as such things are, in momenta of perplexity.

"So be it," she said. "We had better

"So be it," she said. "We had better start—It is growing dusk, or that cloud is coming up very fast."

They clambered up the ascent—Milly somewhat burthesed with a plaid which she had brought on her arm to make a comfortable seat, and Leonie so weary that even the excitement of knowing they were lost could not make her forget her intense fatigue.

But of all people in the world, each felt But of all people is the world, each felt that her companion was the last person to whom she would admit either waariness or fear—so they climbed on, laughing and jesting, and being as witty and playful for each other's benefit, as if they had been in a ball-room with a crowd of men to listen to their bon mosts.

They were at the ten of the cliff and street.

bon mots.

They were at the top of the diff and stepped an instant to get breath and look out for some sign of the village.

Away in the west were broad streaks of dark red half covered with smoky flecks, but the mist or rain coming from the south had rushed up so rapidly, that it was like gazing out over a gray sea, and in the dim light the path at their feet looking fearfully precipitoes and uncertain.

Leonie gave one glance and started back a liktle.

"Not in the least; my head was disny for SATURDAY EVENING POST "Come thee_f'll go first."
"No indeed; that shall

"No indeed; that shall be my privilege."

No helped out of an unpleasantness, or it might be danger, by this woman? No; liftly would not, if the consequence of leading the way were to be a fail from the top of the height, and a blaken book to be unred! She started down the suspicion of a path without another trangd, and Leonie followed with a rackiess laugh. Two old woodsmen could not have shown less appearance of timidity, and certainly would have displayed much more caution, than those two womes, animated by feelings of cordial hatred on one side and scounful repulsion on the other, caused by consciousness of that same hate.

Down they went; the descent which un-hate.

Down they west; the descent which under ordinary circumstances would have been rather arduous than dangerous, now really was sufficiently perflows, for the red light died out of the sky and the mist surged rapidly toward them, some drops of chily rain already beginning to fall as a precursor of the storm which was close at hand.

They had passed the steepest part of the way and were apparently approaching a series of glens similar to those on the other side of the hills, and the sound of waterfalls began to be audible.

"Can you see out at all?" Mrs. Dormer asked.

a.ked.
"Not in the least? I thought when we

" No m "No more than if we were in the moon."

Leonie tried to laugh—made a mi-step—tried to catch at a shrub for support, but the twigs gave way in her hand, and she fell heavily upon the ground, unable to repress one sharp cry of pain.

Alily was some distance in advance, peering about among the shadows, but she heard the sound and called—

"You did not fall? You're not hurt?"

There was no appearance made hard way.

"You're not hurt?"
There was no answer; she made her way hastly back to the spot, and found Madame trying to loosen her dress from the bushes and get up.
"Oh, are you hurt?" Milly naked, her anxiety at ence roused.
"I think not—I can't tell till I'm up—very awkward of me—thank you," as Milly extrionted her dress and helped her to rise.
But the instant she tried to stand, the pain forced a groom from her, and she would have failen if Milly had not held her figure.

firmly. "What is it—where are you burt?"

"What is it—where are you hurt?"

"My foot—"

"You have oprained your ankle?"

"I don't think it is—the pain is in my foot. Let me sit down a minute—perhaps I have only bruised it against a stone."

Milly forgot has dislike to the woman—the wrongs she had received at her hands—everything except her suffering, and that she could see was excessive by the whiteness of Mrs. Dormer's face and the nervous elenching of her hands. Carefully as she could have touched a sister, Milly seated her on a convenient rock, and supported her in her arms.

"I beg your pardon—I didn't think I was such a baby! Let it alone—I can walk—I must walk."

must walk."

She struggled to her feet—tried to take a step and fell backward.

"I can't do it," she said, the horrible pain sending a deathly faintness over her;
"I must have broken some bone in my foot."
"Let me get your shoe and stocking off

and—"
"No, no—it would do no good! See now—you must not mind me—just leave me here and make the best of your way down."
"Indeed I will not!"

"You must come out somewhere—you can send somebody back for me."
"I shall not leave you, Mrs. Dormer—that

"Then I shall walk if it kills me." "You will do no such thing," returned Milly firmly, restraining her as she tried to go on," Leonie said.

"I am not quite a brute," exclaimed Milly.

"I am not quite a urute, "I am not quite a urute, "I adeed, you are only too kind," returned he warmiy. "But you see it can do ne cood to stay—I'm not in the least afraid good to stay—I'm not in the besides, you would be sure to find help some

"I might land in the woods at the foot of South Mountain—quite as likely as any-ere."

" Honestly!"

"Honestly! I don't know which way to turn."

"Well, certainly there's no use filling the neighborhood with lost and distressed fe-A new and severer twings of pain checked

A new and severer twings of pain checked her words.

"I must find a more comfortable place for yen," Milly said, "and get your boot off—wait a moment."

She ran a little further down the descent and found herself in a sheltered glen; in the dim light she could see a waterfall dashing across the rocks before her—near by was a group of trees, under which she spread her plaid, then hurried back. In spite of Mrs. Dermer's expostulations, Milly half-carried her to the place, and after the first attempt to rest her foot on the ground, Leonie had enough to de to keep back the groan which the exquisite torture elicited. Supported Mility, she managed to hubble on the ler foot to the trees, and then near nted. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE sweetest songs are those That few men ever hear And no men ever sing;

The clearest skies are these That farthest off appear To birds of strongest wing:

The dearest loves are those That no man can come near With his best following.

In Paris a fat est is said now to be route $1.90.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, Dec. 24, 1870.

THERMS

The terms of THE POST are the m those of that boantiful magazine, THE LADY'S FRIEND—in order that the cinbe may be made up of the paper and magazine conjointly when so desired—and are se folows: -Oue copy (and a large Premium Steel Eagraving) $2.50; Two copies $4.00; Pour sopies $6.00; Five copies (and one extra) $8.00; Eight copies (and one extra) $12.00. One copy of THE POST and one of THE LADY'S FRIEND, $4.00. Every person gotting up a club will receive the Premium Engraving in addition.

Club subscribers who wish the Prenium Bograving must send one dollar estra. To those who are not subscribers we will furnish it for two dollars. Subscribers in the British Provinces must remit twenty cents extra for postage. Papers in a club will be sent to different post-offices if desired. Contents of Post and of Lady's Friend always entirely different. Subscribers, in order to save themselves from loss, should, if possible, procure a Postoffice order on Philadelphia; or get a draft on Philadelphia or New York, payable to our order. If a draft cannot be had, send a check payable to our order on a National Bank; if even this is not procurable, send United States notes and register the letter. Do not send money by the Express Companies, unless you pay their charges. Always be sure to name your Post-office, County, and State. SEWING MACHINE Premium. For 30 subscribers at $2,50 apiece—or for 20 subscribers and $60—we will send Grover & Baker's No. 28 Machine, price $55. By remitting the difference of price in cash, any higher priced Machine will be sent. Every subscriber in a Premium List, inasmuch as he pays $2.50, will get the Premium Steel Engraving. The lists may be made up conjointly, if desired, of THE POST and the LADY'S FRIEND.

Samples of THE POST will be sent for 5 cents of the Lady's Friend for 10 cents. Samples of both will be sent free to those desirous of getting up clubs.

Address HENRY PETERSON & CO., 319 Walaut St., Philadelphia

THE LADY'S PRIEND.

With the January number of this " Queen of the Monthlies," a new and, as the ladies say, very desirable feature is added.

By an arrangement made with a celebrated Pattern House in New York, accurate patterns of nearly all the designs for suits, &c., in the Magazine, can be furnished at very low prices. These patterns are believed to be superior to all others in the market, for the case with which the ladies of every family can understand and use them. Many of what are called patterns, the ladies tell us, are utterly useless to any but a professional seamstress-but these are available for common bousehold work and ingenuity.

The ability to furnish such cheap and admirable patterns to its readers, gives "THE LADY's FRIEND," we think, a superiority over all its competitors. It will enable the ladies to save the cost of the magazine many times over in the course of the yearand make it thus a matter of positive economy to subscribe for it. The LADY'S FRIEND is still furnished with THE POST. See Terms.

OUR LETTERS. Our letters renewing subscriptions come to us as usual at this season of the year, freighted with complimentary allusions to THE POST and THE LADY'S PRIEND. Of course we cannot pretend to give all that is said-but we may note the following from last week's letters: J. H. T., of Lexington, Virginia, says:-"We regard THE POST as one of the best

T. A. J., of Rushville, Indiana, says:-"I find it less trouble each year to get up a Club, as your paper and magazine be-come better known. It is impossible for us to do without them."

Mrs. L. C. F., of Canton, Illinois, says:-"I think I cannot do without THE POST and THE LADY'S PRIEND-and shall take them as long as I live, Mire S. McN., of Moorefield, West Virginia, says:-"I have been thinking I ought to take but one of them next year—but after trying for weeks to make up my mind which to give up, I have come to the conclusion that I cannot possibly do without both the paper and the magazine."

M. M., of Gwynedd, Pennsylvanis, in re newing her subscription, writes:-

"I could not possibly relinquish so old and cherished a friend as THE POST, for it has been received with pleasure in my home

Mrs. A. J. B., of Bloomingsburg, Indian 8A79:-

"We have taken your paper the last year, and we are very much pleased with it. I rend you a Club of five subscribers, all new

J. L. B., of Kilmarnock, Pennsylvania AATS: -"I cannot give up such dear friends of

Mrs. J. E. W., of Indian

"This makes seventeen years that we have been taking your paper—and I would so soon think of doing without butter for our table, so doing without TEE POST."

Mrs. J. B. B., of Poterboro, New York,

"How any one can read a single number of THE POST, and say no when saked to subscribe, is more than I can understand."

S. A. B., of Lebanon, New Hampshire, BAYS :-"Your paper is the best of the weeklies in the opinion of all your old subscribers here, myself included."

POREIGN NEWS.

PARIS IN DARKNESS.—A despatch in the Times, dated Berlin, December 14, states that the supply of gas in Paris has given out, and the city after sundown is in total darkand the city after sundown is in total darkness. The confusion consequent on this adds very manifestly to the horrors of the war.
The darkness is favorable to the desertion of the besieged, and detachments of French soldiers are stationed at all outlets of the city to stop deserters.
With the surrender of Montmady, 65 cannon and 3,000 prisoners fell into the rands of the Germane, and 236 German prisoners were released.
Proofs of the Prussian scheme for the Proofs of the Prussian sobeme for the restoration of the French Empire come from every quarter. Bismarck says this is the only way the war can end; that republican France will fight forever; that the fall of Paris can produce no effect; that the only course is to make terms with the Empire and go home, and leave the French to fight it out between themselves.

BISMARCK AS A DUKE.—Wolff telegraphs from Berlin on the 14th that Bismarck is to be made a Duke. The King wishes his title to be Duke of Strasbourg, but Bismarck wants to retain his own name.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—The Provincial Correspondence of this morning, in an article on the progress of the war, says that the proposed bombardment of Paris has again been postponed, because such a course at present Proofs of the Prussian scheme for the posed bombardment of Paris has again been postponed, because such a course at present would be detrimental to the military operations. The real object of the war and the interests of the army at this juncture are of paramount consideration; and unquestionably, at the right moment, the commander of the investing army will take such action as will fully insure immediate and future success.

Paris letters of the 9th announce the situation as good. The repulse of the army of the Loire and the recapture of Orleans have not discouraged the Parisians. There is a general demand for more sortices and a projection of the announcement by naversal approval of the answer sent by Gen. Trochu to Gen. Moltke, and the people all say they will resist to the last.

The measures taken by the government since the commencement of the siege are accepted willingly by the population. Hay-The measures taken by the government since the commencement of the siege are accepted willingly by the population. Having incured itrelf against waste of provisions, of which there are enough to last until February, the government will again issue fresh meat rations to the inhabitants. Other provisions are sufficient to last six months.

Madding to the inhabitants of the first acts of King Amadeus, of Spain, will be to give one-half of the appanage of the Crowu, amounting to some twenty millions of dollars, to the Treasury.

The Times of the 15th, in an editorial on the Luxembourg question, says it is not England's duty alone to resist the absorption of Luxembourg by Prussia, and thinks that perhaps Prussia may be satisfied with that acquisition and forego the taking of Lorraine from France. A Cabinet council will be held to-day, which is expected to define the attitude of England.

King William, of Holland, has telegraphed to the Government of Luxembourg, that he will defend the treaty of 1867, and the honor

a.ing william, of Holland, has telegraphed to the Government of Luxembourg, that he will defend the treaty of 1867, and the honor and independence of the Duchy. He also approves the acts of the Government of Luxembourg.

embourg.

A despatch to the Times, dated Versailles 15, says the Luxembourg question will pro-duce no complications here. Her indepen-dence is preserved unless she openly supprotes France.

KING WILLIAM AND THE POPE.—LONDON, Dee, 16.—Mr. Taudien telegraphs on the 15th, that the Papal Buvoy, M. Kogman, arrived at Versailles on the 15th inst, with important despatches from the Pope to Bismarck and the King. It is certain the King promised the Pope to restore in him his temporal power as soon as the present war ends. The official journal, the Helk, states that the King has also determined to restore

FLORENCE, Dec. 15 .- In the Italian Parliament to-day, Senor Laura made a power-ful speech in support of the bill relative to the guarantees to be given to the Pope. He said the Catholic world demanded every e which it was possible for Italy to

A bill for the consideration of Papal debts

To Make Cloth Water-proof.

A writer in an Eeglish journal says:—
"By-the-way, touching water-proofs, I think I can give travellers a valuable hint or two. For many years I have worn India rabber water-proof; but I will buy no more, for I have learned that good Scottish tweed can be made completely impervious to rain, and, moreover, I have learned how to make it so; and for the benefit of my readers, I will here give the recipe:

and for the benefit of my readers, I will here give the recipe:

"In a pail of soft water, put half a pound of sugar of lead, half a pound of lead and half a pound of alam; stir this at intervals until it becomes clear; then pour it off into snother pail, and put the garment sherwin, and let it be in for twenty-four hours and then hang it up to dry without wringing it. Two of my party—a lady and gontleman—have worn garments thus treated in the wilders storm of wind and rain without getting wet. The rain hangs upon the cloth in globules; in short they are really waterproof.

proof.

"The gentleman, a fortnight ago, walked nine miles in a sterm of wind and rain, such as you rarely see in the south, and when he stipped off his overcost, his underclother were as dry as whos he put them on. This is, I think, a secret worth knowing; for cleth, if it can be made to keep out wet, is in every way better than what we know as water-proofs."

The first velvet factory in the United tates has just been started in Kansas.

DOWN A WELL.

AN INCIDENT OF THE WAR.

In a little village rear Beseilies, before the fall of Sedan and the eccapation of the surrounding country by the Prumians, a party of Zouaves caught sight of a young officer of Husears, who had ventured alume upon a daring reconnaissance, in anivance of his party. They instantly gave chase. Our Hassar dashed away; but two or three light-heeled French soldiers rapidly ascended a piece of rising ground, and were able to bring down his horse with the far-ranging bullets of the Chassepot. The Husar was presently made prisoner; and as he spoke French and complimented his captors in a joudiar vein on their skill and celerity, the Zouaves at once became very friendly—gave him some wine and a cigar to smoke while they searched him. The only things they found is his pockets were a Dutch pipe, an empty tobacce pouch, an old knife, and a torn letter. Of course, none of the French knew a word of German, and were still less likely to decipher a word in the German handwriting; but, thinking it might contain accuse thing him go down upon his knees, and swear, upon his honor, to give them a faithful translation. He explained that the letter was from a brother officer in one of the new regiments, which had not yet been engaged; and that the part torn off had been for his pipe. He then read what remained:—

"The wagons with our rations are on the way, but we find them very slow. This is altogether a very honery business. It began with hunger of the French for eur lovely Rhime—"
Some excerations burst from his auditors, and the prisoner stopped; but was instastly

Rhine—"
Some executions burst from his auditors, and the prisoner stopped; but was instantly ordered to go on.

"And this is really not surprising, because they once possessed it, and know what a beautiful country it is. But we all event—do we not, my dear Ernet?—that never again shall French freech hop on the banks of that lovely river."

The prisoner was here interrupted by a

of that lovely river."

The prisoner was here interrupted by a demand to be informed if the word freech was of an insulting character; but, being assured that it was merely a philological form in natural history, he was allowed to proceed.

form in natural history, he was allowed to proceed.

"The French are wefully off as to their generals. Only see how they send cavalry to attack our infantry and artillery in a wood! And this repeatedly. Then, they are continually surprised: one of the greatest faults, you know. Our officers are never surprised. MacMahon is a valiant fellownot a first-rate general, but a good and honorable man—notwithstanding the out-and-out (ganskich) thrashing we gave him. Besides that, we were always able to outwit (uberhisten) him by Von Moltka's art. Bazaine seems a very good and trustworthy man; so does Uhrich—but then he is far more German than French."

More executions.

"As for the chief commander in Paris, what do you think of—
The unfortunate Hüssar paused; but he was ordered to go on; and reminded, at the point of the bayonet, of his oath.

"What do you think of old Zu-viel Kohl?"
The Hussar explained that it was only a pun—a mere jeu des mets—not to be translated. Here one of the Zouavus cunningly insisted upon looking at that part of the letter; and then it was found that the Prussian correspondent had written his pun in ian correspondent had written his pun in

What do you think of old Trop-cheu (too much cabbage?") Their great commander of Paris (Trochu) being thus designated as soo much of an old bbage! Some of the Zonaves were for bayoneting Some of the Zouaves were for bayoneting or shooting their prisoner upon the spot. In vain the Hussar endeavored to make them see he had not written the letter—he had not made the offensive jest. It was a letter written ie, and not by him. His enraged captors said they could not enter into any of these fine distinctions, and he should therefore be shot as a spy!

It appears that this very legical verdict would have led to the speedy execution of the luckless Hussar; but that one of the Zouaves suddenly called their attention, in a humoroas way, to the fact that it was a

Zouaves suddenly called their attention, in a humorous way, to the fact that it was a promising pun for a Prussan; that such signs of wit in a barbarous, beer-swilling nation deserved some favor; that the offence was only committed by their prisoner at second-hand, because he had received and had not written the letter. This intriposition was received with great laughter, and the punishment of the bullet or the bayonet was commuted by a proposal to lower the

be off, before the officer of the night watch

got sight of him.

After the grave spocryphal manifesto of the Emperor Napoleon—not to speak of many of the telegrame—one does not know what to believe. We may doubt the authorition of the above story; but, certainly,

The Origin of Names

The Origin of Names.

We understand why cortain fabrics are known as silk, linen, cotton, and woollen; as these clothes all take their name from the material of which they are manufactured.

But it may not be quite so clear to the young lady why her dainty ruffles are cambric, and only her cotton dresses are called called or musils. Nor to the bounet-maker why laces, flowers, ribbons, etc., should be millinery, and herself a milliner.

Cambric, both lines and cotton, was first manufactured in Cambray, hence its name. Calico takes its name from Calicut, a place in India. Monesel, a city in Turkey, was noted for its elegant musium; and claims the invention of that species of cotton goods.

the invention of that species of cotton goods.

Bo also, the tavteful wares known as millinery, were first imported to Paris and London from Milan-accent on the first syllable—and were called Milanry. It is not impossible that the notable housekeeper, looking proudly at her spotless table linen, supposes that some peculiar twist in the thread makes it damask—at least we've heard it so explained. This linen, ernamented with figures and flowers, derives its name from Damascus, a place anciently celebrated, not alone for its manufactures of silk and linen, but for its wonderfully tempered steel, of which the unequalled Damascus blade was composed.

At first this cloth was made of silk and dax, and called Damascuse. Afterwards of times, and more recently of woollen and cotton; so that we have various kinds of damask.

We should like to know if our chilising ton; so that we have various kinds of damask.

We should like to know if our obliging "grocery man," as some people persist in calling grocer—"for short," we suppose—is troubled with weighty reflections as to the origin of his title.

Grocer, which means now a dealer in certain articles called groceries, was formerly applied to one who bought and sold only by the gross or wholesale. Johnson says it should be written gromer.

Gupper, a term meaning exclusively the last meal of the day, was originally a simple meal of soup, taken at any time. And sancer was a dish for holding sauce, instead of a cup.

saucer was a dish for holding sauce, instead of a cup.

Countenance signifies the contents, or all the features of the face, with their expression; which should be truthful and kind; which will be when the heart is so. Nestril is from nose and thrill—to drill or pierce. In early editions of figeneer, this was printed nearthrill; and earlier, nose-thrills.

It may be interesting to those who are in pursuit of the dollar, to know that this object of paramount importance, is named from the Danish word deler; and that from Dale, the town where it was first coined. Guinea is a coin so called because made formerly from the precious Guinea gold.

A boor has come to be a person desti-gold.

A boor has come to be a person destitute of culture and refinement. But there was a time when all not belonging to the nobility, were boors; which was then no more a term of reproach than "the common people" is now. In those days, the persons or boors whose habitations were near were nigh boors, which words, compressed into one send a neighbor down to posterity. Let us esteem ourselves fortunate, if the make-up of those dwelling near us, don't tempt us to go back to the original.

Listle Winnie.

It was one of those raw and chilly days that cometimes come late in May; when but for the lengthened twilight and sunset of pale gold—so different from the crimson fires that antum hindles on her evening hearth—we would think that winter frost instead of summer flowers lay just beyond.

House cleaning had been accomplished, and the stores had vanished from the dining-room, and the grates in the large pariors were closed.

The ladies were ablvering in their thick silks and spring alpacas; and we, thought to be of hardier make, found our heavy broadcloths none too wasm.

But Winnie, our entertainer's little grandchild, was running about in her white muschild, was running about in her white mus-lin, with arms and shoulders bare. There was no danger; she was used to it. I heard them say so. She was the prettiest child I

THE VICTORY OF THE VANQUISHED. A Story of the First Century. By the author of the "Caronicies of the fishonoberg-Cotta Family," etc., etc. Published by Dodd & Mead, 762 Broadway, New York; and also for sale by Forter & Coater, Philada.

THE YELLOW MASE. A Novel. By WILKIE COLLINS, author of "The Woman in White," etc. Published by T. B. Pikerson & Bros., Philada.

Col.Lins, author of "The Woman in White," etc. Published by T. B. Piterson & Bros., Philada.

THE ADVERTIBER'S HAND-BOOK: Comprising a Complete List of all Newspapers, Periodicals and Marastaces published in the United States and British Possessions. Arranged by Counties, with the population of Counties and Towns, separate lists of the
Daily, Religious and Agricultural Newspapers, and a history of the Newspaper Press.
Published by S. M. Pattengil & Co., Newspaper Adv. Agents, 37 Park Row, New York.
THE ATLANTIC MONTRILY for January,
1871. Contains "A Year in a Venetian
Palace," "The Fugitive," "Miss Moggaridge's Provider," "The Valley of Gastein," "Madam Delia's Expectations," "Castilian Days," "Our Eyes, and how to take care of them," "The Bisters," "Dorothy Q," and other articles and poems. Published by Fields, Oegood & Co., Bostos.

THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF THE AMERICAN LITERARY GARETTE AND PUBLISHERS CIRCULAR. A Complete List of illustrated
and other Books, suitable for Presentation
and Rewards. Published by George W.
Childs, Philada. It is almost as good as having the books themselves to look over these tempting notices and beautiful illustrations.

PUNCHINELLO. Published by the Punchinelie Publishing Co., New York. Full of some funny and some not very funny thinge,
as usual. On the whole, pretty good.

How They Bathe at Venice

Here I am reminded of another pleasure of modern dwellers in Venetian palaces, which could hardly have been indulged in by the patricians of old, and which is hardly imaginable by people of this day, where front doors open upon dry land. I mean to say the privilege of sea-bathing from one's own threshold. From the beginning of Jane till far into fleptember all the canals of Venice are populated by the amphibious boys, who claimor about in the brine, or poise themselves for a leap from the tops of bridges, or show their fine, statuscipus figures, browned by the ardeal was, against the facades of empty painoes, where they hover among the marble soulptures, and meditate a headlong plungs. It is only the Venetian ladies, in fact, who do not share this handthful amusement. Fathers of families, like so many plump, domestic drakes, lead forth their squatic broods, teaching the little ones to swim by the aid of various floats, and delighting in the gambols of the larger ducklings. When the tide comes in fresh and strong from the sea the water in the Grand Canal is pure and refreshing; and at these times is is a singular pleasure to leap from one's door-size into the swift current, and apond a half-bour, very informally, among one a neighbors there. The Venetian bathing-dress is a mere sketch of the pantaloons of ordinary life; and when I used to stand upon our balcony, and see some bearded head ducking me a poilte salutation from a pair of broad, brown shoulders that showed above the water, I was not always able to recognise my acquaintance, deprived of his factitious identity of clothes. But I always knew a certain stately consul-general by a vast expanse of belienes upon the top of his head; and it must be owned, I think, thet this form of social assembly was, with all its disadvantages, a novel and vivacious spectacle. The Venetian ladies, when they bath-houses in front of the Duoal Palace, where they asturated themselves a good part of the day, and drank coffee, and, possibly, gossipud.—Aflantic Monthly.

English Fruits and Vegetables.

English Fruits and Vegetables,
Are the fruits and vegetables really so poor and meagre in England. Hawthorne complained that no English fruit equalled in flavor a home-grown turnip. Other Americans testify to the small supply—the lack of variety. A friend, who lived some time in lodgings in Loadon, say they grow very tired of their day-after-day cauliflower and potatoes. (Turnips had been valed out from the first.) Finally she appealed desperately to the cook, when she came one morning, as usual, for instructions: "But cannot we have some other vegetable? Is there really nothing to be found but potatoes and caself flower?" Cook considered deeply for a mothe pusishment of the bullet or the bapoulement of the result of the pusishment of the second mental properties of the pusishment of the second mental properties of the present moment searly supply. But ris were many the present moment searly supply. But ris were many the present moment searly supply. But ris were many to the present moment searly supply. But ris were many to the present moment searly supply. But ris were the present moment the present force of the present point in the presence of the present point in the present nothing to be found but potatoes and easifilower?" Cook considered deeply for a moment, then emerged with the triumphant suggestion, "I might meak the potatoes, mum!" The same lady declares that, visiting at a country-house near London, she really felt a delicacy about eating freely the dosin or so strawberries assigned her, so very inadequate did the quantity for general use look to her—hardly more than one person's portion in her own home. Another lady reports that, staying somewhere in England at a friend's, one cantelope—the one identical melen—aerved three days as dessert, being each day carefully removed from table to some coul place. Our American fashion of sitting down around the great rough basket holding nearly a bushel of this fruit, and then and there "going through" it, rejecting all save the spiciest and most saccoarine specimens, must seem somewhat massive in the eyes of our English cousins.

—Galaxy.

A Working Butt for Parmers.

A Working Suits for Frarmers.

Farmers and mechanics need some kind of a rubstantial working dress—one that is cheaply made and easily put on and comfectably worn. It is very expensive working in a good suit of clothes and exposing them to the various kinds of labor incident to farm life. Put on a pair of new pants and get into an apple tree to trim or grafs it, or go to repairing feners and you will be sure to make a rent in them before they are a day o'd. Such a thing rarely happens to an old pair. We invented a dress several years since which we have used and recommended to others much to their satisfaction. It is a sleeve west closed in front, and trowsers in one piece, with only one fastening with a strap behind the neck. The sleeve may be made sufficiently large enough to wear over a coat. The material should be of blue drilling.

made sufficiently large enough to wear over a coat. The material should be of blue drilling.

Thus at a triffing expense a man can be readily fitted to grapple with any kind of work without a constant fear of tearing or solling his clothes, while the cost is not one-tenth part of a suit of ordinary clothing. It will often be found convenient to wear in hot weather without any other clothing than a shirt. Any clever housekeeper who can make a pair of summer pants, can make one of these most useful articles. The only difficulty usually is not buying cloth enough to have them made sufficiently large. The suit should be large enough to wear over other garments, if necessary, and when the day's work is done it may be removed, others substituted, and the farmer is in complete trim to sit down of an evening dressed in clean clothes and ready to engage in conversation, reading, or any other ammenment suited to a rational and intelligent mind. The cost of such a suit is triffing, and is more than made up by what it saves of other clothes.—Maine Furmer.

Consectous Breamsing.

One of the peculiarities of my dreams is, that I am never absorbed in them entirely. I never lose the conviction that I am dreaming, and whatever visionary troubles befall me, I know that they will come to a speedy end—a comfortable assurance, since my dreams are almost invariably bed. If I am botly pursued by a wild beast or as irresistible foe, I throw myself, as I suppose, on the ground, and covering my face eith my hands, by a violent action of the will, fasce myself into wahefulness.

I will give a ourious instance of my peouliarity in this respect. In the course of one of my dreams, I was brought as a captive into the presence of some Algarian despes, who sat on a throne, with a numerous bedy of soldiers on each side of him, and who measued me with horrible tortures. Histened patiently, and when his discourse was ended, I said with perfect calmness:

'This is very well now; but you are perfectly awars that when I open my eyes, you and your soldiers will all go to the—''

Evidently the nail had been hit on the head. The soldiers nudged each other, and uneasily exchanged significant winks, indicating that I had discoursed the sourt of nothingness. The sultan or dey (whichever he was) locked crustfalles, but put on as good a face as he could, and said with evident reluciance: "Well, you may go." I left the spot with the utmost inscience, anapping my fingers at the soldiers, who, as I passed them, stared at me with the most intense expression of a Dreamer.

THE CHINERE.—It is reported that a

THE CHINERE.—It is reported that a Chinese Immigration Agency has been established in New York, and that contracts have already been entered into to supply several hundred Chinese laborars to prominent manufacturers in New England and the Middle States. The laborars are supplied in any number from ten upwards, under contract to serve for two and three years, for 256 gold per month, and a suitable building for them to loock, eat, and sleep in. The employers are to supply the tools suitable for the trade at which the Chinese are to be employed, and are to allow Sundays and two holidays in addition in each year. The mea engaged to work ten hours a day.

THE MARKETS.

FLOUR.—700 bbls sold in lots at prices ranging from $4,400$, for raperfine; $4,100$, $50 for raperfine; $4,100$, $50 for raperfine; $5,100$, $50 for Fransfamily; $5,50$, $70 for Fransfamily; $5,50$, $70 for Pransfamily; $5,50$, $70 for Pransfamily; $5,50$, $70 for Residence of Prices wells at $64,50$, $60 bbl.

GRAIN.—Wheat.—90,000 bus sold at $1,400,40 for Indian rand, $1,500,40 for raper, and $7,500,140 for Indian rand, $1,500,40 for raper, and $7,500,140 for Indian rand, $1,500,40 for raper, and $7,500,140 for local rand, $1,500,40 for raper, and $7,500 for ranger rad, $1,500,40 for ranger, and $1,500,40 for ranger rad, $1,500 and Western.

PROVISIONS—Sales of new Mess Pork at $20,9 20,50; clear at $20, and extra prime at $16. Mess
Reef at $20,50; 27 $\overline{\text{W}}$ bil for city packed extra mealised lines may be quoted at $10 $\overline{\text{W}}$ bils.
Beet lines at $20,50; 27 $\overline{\text{W}}$ bil for city packed extra mealised for the second city sended discount of the secondlines at $20,50; and $10,00; and $10,00; and $10,00;
and $10,00; and $10,00;
and $10,00; and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;
and $10,00;

PHILADRIPHIA CATTLE MARKETS. The supply of Sect Cattle during the past week amounted to about $450 hasd. The priese realized from $10,5 % cat $8. 200 Cows brought from $45 to $0 $$ hase. Thesp-16,000 hasd were disposed of at from $45.00 $$ hase. $8. 8000 Hogs sold at from $4,00 to $,00 $100 hs.

Interesting to Ladies.

"It gives me great pleasure to add to the many satisfactory nationousles of the Grover & Baker Sev-ing Machiner, having had one in use six years, which works as well to-day as the first day I had it.

HEALTHI BEAUTY).

PTRONG, PURE AND RICH BLOOD, INCREASE OF PLESE AND WEIGHT, CLEAR SKIN AND BRAUTIPUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL

RADWAT'S SARSAPARITLIAN RESOLVENT BAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURRS SO QUICE. SO BAPTO AND THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES UNDER THE INPLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT EVERT DAY AN INCREASE IN LESS AND WRIGHT IS SEEN AND PELT.

Glandsiar Disease,
Ulcers in the Throat and Month,
Tumors, Nodes in the Glands,
And other parts of the system,
Bore Eyes,
Brumous diseases of the

And the worst forms of Skin Discs Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rhoum, Erystpoins, Cancers in the Womb, and all Kidney, Biadder, Trinney and

Fomb Diseases, Gravel, Disbetes, Dropey, Stoppage of Wasse, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Weakness and Painful Discharges, Night Sweats, Are within the country range of

RADWATS SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease, its potent power

ONE DOLLAR A BOTTLE Principal office 07 Maiden Lane, New York. Sold by Druggists.

Bostettor's United States Almenes for 1671, for distribution, gratie, throughout the United States, and all civilised countries of the Western Hemis-phere, will be published about the first of January, nd all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggottone it contains. In addition to an admirable medical tradition on the excess, provention and once of a great variety of discasos, it embraces a large mount of information interesting to the merchant, the mechanic, the miner, the farmer, the planter, and professional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensive Na-PHORAL CALBEDAR.

The nature, usee, and extraordinary sanitary of freets of HOPTETER'S STOMACH BRITTERS, the staple sonic and alterative of more than half the Christian world, are fully set forth in fid pages, which are also interspersed with pictured; illestrations, valuable recipes for the household and form, hamorous assectates, and other instructive and amosing reading matter, original and octobed.—Among the Annuals to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most markel, and may be had for the aching. The properture, Mosers. Household of Smith, on receipt of a two cold istang, will forward a copy by mail to any passes who cannot procure one in his neighborhood. The Bitters are sold in every city, town and village, dad are extensively used throughout the entire diviliand world, decod-ti

To Cure a Cough, Cold or Here The ROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCKES, novillem

A Young Wife's Sequent.

Wife-Charler, I wish when you come up to-night you'd stop into your druggist's and get me a bettle of PLANYATION SETVEND. De sure to get the genuine. Charler-What in the world, Mary, are you going to do with Plantation Bitters?

Wife-Everyhody that I know is in ceetacy over Plantation Bitters.

Wis-Mercyclosy that I know is in ecetary over Plantation Bittern, and I am guing to try them myself. I am assured by several of my triends that the Bitters will cure my dyspepsis, and at the same time do may with that terrible nauses which you know I am at times subject to. The doctor was in yesterday, and says that all I want is a tonic, and that Plantation Bitters is the best that can be got. strange that I had not thought of it before Sua Moss Panens from pure Irish Moss, for bisne monge, puddiage, custards, creame, &a., &c. The cheapert, healthiest, and most delicious food in the nord.

MARRIAGES.

Marriage notices must always be accept a responsible name.

On the 7th instant, by the Rev. William Cathoart, Mr. Alonso F. Coppon to Miss Many A. Bannes, both of this city.
On the 7th instant, by the Rev. W. C. Robinson, Mr. Lindlay M. Bleinvou to Miss Junnia Rupp, both of this city.
On the 8th instant, by John G. Wilson, V. D. M. Pranucs Raynt, both of this city.
In September, by the Rev. J. R. Petars, Mr. Genes R. Tourasson to Miss Sallas J. Kho, both of this city.
On the 7th instant, by the Rev. Wm. B. Wood, of this city.

On the 7th instant, by the Rev. Wm. B. Wood, Mr. David R. Banary to Mire Many A. Roany, both of this city.

On the 10th restant, by the Rev. Geo. Bringhurst, Mr. Sanual Sallay to Mire Habitay Luyg, both of this city.

BEATES.

Notices of Deaths must always be accompa-nied by a responsible name.

On the 12th instant, Mrs. Sanan H. Suplan, in her On the 18th instant, CHRINDA E. SHERWER, aged On the 19th Instant, Rustine Connects, aged 13 On the 19th instant, HENRY D. HAVERS, in his 27th On the 12th instant, Henry D. Havens, in the Fritzen, on the 12th instant, Sarah A. CLIFFORD, in her 70th year.
On the 15th instant, Anna Mary, wife of Ashisad Beckett, in her 60th rest.
On the 18th instant, Edwin T. S. Lewys, in his 7th year.
On the 10th instant, Wrs. Mary Synyamion, in her 60th year.
On the 10th instant, Henry H. Means, in his 7th year.
On the 9th instant, Mrs. Harrier M. Lawbence, in her 68th year.

多色的新色

THE COMING YEAR.

We may note especially among our arrange ments for the coming year, a new story called

DENE HOLLOW.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD, author of "East Lyone," "Beary Rane," &c.

We may add that it is always the aim Mrs. Wood, in her stories, to combine a high degree of interest with the feculcation of some moral lesson. And it is this which renders her stories such favorites with the great majority of readers. Those who speak of her as a merely " sensational" writer, simply have caught up a parrot cry, and show their atter ignorance of her works.

Early in January, we design commencing a

TERMS.

We are still able to offer all NEW sub-

3 MONTHS FOR NOTHING,

beginning their subscriptions for 1871 with the paper of October 5th, which contains the beginning of LEONIE'S MYSTERY, by Frank Lee Benedict. This is

THIRTEEN PAPERS

IN ADDITION to the regular weekly numbers for 1871, or

FIFTEEN MONTHS IN ALL! WE HAVE A GOODLY SUPPLY OF BACK NUMBERS STILL ON HAND.

This offer applies to all NEW subscribers, single or in clubs. See our lew Terms;

One copy (and a Premium Steel Englay $2 50 ing? 4.00 6.00 " (and one extra) 8.00

" (and one extra)

45 (and one extra)

" (and one extra)

12.00

Rither of these engravings will be sent, as desired. If no directions are given, "The Sisters" will be sent.

Chub Subscribers who wish a Pre ium Engraving must send one dollar ostra. To those who are not subscribers we will furnish them for fee dellars. All these engravings are done on Steel-they are not wood-cuts or lithographs.

TO OLD SUBSCRIBERS.

Cannot each of you, taking advantage of the above liberal offers, make up a Club of NEW subscribers? To the gettar-up of every 'Club we send our beautiful new Premium Engraving "THE SISTERS," (or either of our other Premium Engravings); and to the getter-up of a Club of five or over, an extra copy of THE POST, (or of THE LADY'S PRIERD) besides. Where the Clubs are compeed of both old and new subscribers, the latter should have the word " new" written site their names. The subscriptions old be sent on as soon as obtained (even when the lists, if large, are not full,) in order that the forwarding of the paper to the new subscribers may not be delayed.

Special Offer of Lady's Friend ONE MONTE FOR NOTHING!

All NEW Subscribers (single or in cinbe) to THE LADY'S PRIEND who send on their subscriptions by the first of January, shall receive the pagnificent Describer Holiday number, making direct monde in all!

Sewing Machine Premfum, &c. -See terms on the second page of this

The Shark. INTE EXCHAUSES ON PERST PAGE.

The Shark is said to attain the length of twenty and even thirry feet; but its size is not its worst attribute. Ferocious, voracious, impetator, and inestiable, spread over almost every o'emate, an inhabitant of every sea, the shark rapidly pursues every fish; and threatens with its wide guilet the unfortunate victims of shipwreck, abutting them out from all hope of enfety.

The body of the shark is long, and itsekin is studded with small tuberries: this skin becomes so hard, and takes so high a polish, that it is employed for various ornamental that it is employed for various ornamental purposes. This resisting power protects the sbark from the bites of every inhabitant of the sea, if there he ary during enough to ap-the see, if there he any daring enough to ap-proach it with that view.

The back and sides of the shark are of an asby brown; hereath it is faded white. The head is flat, and terminates in a muzzle slightly rounded. Its terrible mouth is in the form of a semicicile, and of coormous size; the contour of the upper jaw of a abark of ten yards length being about two near him. He eats the cutti-fish, mollusks, and fishes; among others, flounders and codelsh. But the prey which has the greatest charm for him is man; the shock loves him dearly, but it is with the affection of the gourmand. It even manifests, according to some authors, a preference to certain race. If we may believe rome travellers, when several varieties of human food comes in its way, the shark prefers the European to the Aristic, and both to the negro. Still, whatever may be the color, he seeks eagerly for human flesh, and haarts the neighborhood where it hopes to fluct the percore morsel. ever may be the color, he seem eagerly for human fleet, and haarts the neighborhood where it hopes to find the p econic morsel. He follows the ship in which his instinct tells him it is to be found, and makes a straordinary afforts to reach it. He has been known to leap into a boat in order to scize the frightened fishermen; he throws himself upon the ship, cleaving the waves at full spred, to scap up some unhappy sailor who has shown himself beyond the bulwarks. He follows the course of the slaver, ready to engulf the negroes' corpass as they are thrown into the sea. Commercon relates a significant fact bearing on the subject. The corpse of a negro had been superaded from a yard-arm twenty feet above the level of the sea. A shark was seen to make many efforts to reach the body, and it finally succeeded in seizing it, member by member, undisturbed by the cries of the horror-stricken crew assembled on deck to witness the strange spectacle. In order that an animal so large and heavy should be shie to throw itself to this height, the muscles of the triil. o large and heavy should be able to throw itself to this height, the muscles of the tail and posterior parts of the body must have an astonishing power.

The mouth of the shark being placed in

11 " (and one extra) 20.00

14 " (and one extra) 20.00

The copy of The Post and one of The Lady's Friend, 4.00

Breety person getting up a Club will receive one of the large Steel-Plate Premium Engraving and an Extra paper.

Our last Premium Engraving is "The Staters"—a perfect Gem. The others are "Taking the Measure of the Wedding Rieg,"

"The Song of Hame at Sea," "Washington as Mount Vernon," "Edward Everett in his shing operation is conducted as follows:—Choosing a dark night, a hook is prepared by burying it in a piece of lard, and attaching it has of these engravings will be sent as chart to shop and solid wire chain; the graving will be sent as chart to be shaped as the proposed by burying it in a piece of lard, and attaching it to a long and solid wire chain; the chart of these engravings will be sent as chart to the construction of the bring placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being the object which is placed above him. He meets with men bold erough to profit by this coafformation, and the lower part of the shark being the lower part of the shark being placed in the lower part of the shark being the lower part of the shark being the lower part of the shark the lower part of the head, it becomes neces-nary to turn itself round in the water be fore it can set the object which is placed above him. He meets with men bold erough to profit by this coafformation, and the lower the head it can set the object which is placed above him. He meets with men bold erough to profit by this coafformation, and the lower had been as the lower part of the shark to the object which is placed above him the lower than the lower part thank looks askance at his prey, feels it, then leaves it; he is fewpted by withdraw-ing the bait, when he follows, and scallows t gluttoecuely. He now tree to sink into the water, but, checked by the chain, he struggles and fights. By and-by he gets ex-hausted, and the casin is drawn up in such a manner as to raise the head out of the water. Another cord is now thrown out with a running knot or loop, in which the body of the shark is caught about the origin of the tail. Thus bound, the captured shark is soon bolated on deck, as represented in our engraving. On the quarter-neck of the ship he is put to death, not without great pre-caution, however, for he is still a formid-able foe, from his terrible bites and from the still dangerous blows of his tail. Moreover, he dies bard, and long resists the most for he dies bard, and iong resists the most for-midable wounds.

We have thus painted the portrait of the shark. The original is by no means besu-tiful; but, frightful as it may be, our de-scription would be incomplete if we did not add that divine bonors have been granted to this monster of the waters. Man worships farce; he knows the hand which crushes,

We have thus painted the portrait of the shark. The original is by no means beau tiful; bu', frightful as it may be, our description would be incomplete if we did not add that divine bonors have been granted to this monster of the waters. Man worships faree; he knows the hand which creates, the shark is the shark. The inhabitants of several parts of the African coast worship to the first poulou, and consider its atomach the road to heaven. Three or four times in the year they celebrate the frestival of the shark, which is done in this wise.

They all more in their boats to the middle of the river, where they invoke, with the strangest ceremonies, the protection of the grant shark. Thy offer to him poultry and goals, in order to satisfy his mored appetite. But this is nothing; an infant is every year racrificed to the monster, which has been racrefeed to the monster, which has been racrefeed to the assertice from its birth to the age of ten. On the day of the fote it is bound to a poit of a sandy point ablow water; as the side rises, the child may this reire of borrer, but it is abundened to the waven, and the sharks arrive. The mother is not far off; perhaps she weeps, but she dries her teers and thinks that her child has entered heaven through this hortible gate.

The Last of the Sibyls.

There lived in a semote street of Paris, There lived in a semote street of Paris, less November, a woman aged nicety seven years. Her name was hielaide Lenormand, She was was in Almogon, Normandy, in 1772. From 1791, never associated with any other person in her peculiar vocation, never giving occasion for ecandal, never the object of police espicouses, and never but once subjected to rigorous interrogatories at the Palain de Justice, she practiced the arts of astrology and palmistry for more than sixty veers, having palmistry for more than sixty years, baying for patrons the celebrities of Europe, with a success unequaled aimon the Middle Ages. From the first she ruce rapidly into note. Her study of Algebra and sarronous; which she believed indispensable to her not, was increased. Once, indeed, she became in-volved is one of the counties plots for the liberation of Marie Actoinate from the story of adverture.

By Gestave Aimard, author of "The Queen of the Savannab," "Last of the Incas," do.

Aimard writes a stirring story, full of thilling incidents by flood and field, of hair breadth escapes, do., in which both his beroes and his heroines take part.

In addition to these, of course, we shall give a succession of other stories, both original and selected, of the usual excellent quality.

But the desire of The Poet is always to combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preserves and puddings. We aim also to give, therefore, during the combine instruction with amusement, solid intellectual meats and bread and potatoes with its pies, preser

On the 28th of March, 1814, President you Malobus, as he was called—a Prussian diplomatist who sixty years ago played a considerable part in European affairs—was pervalled on by the following circumstance to visit Mademuis elle Lengmand. He was associated with Count Morto in remodeling the royal homeoold of Westphalia. The business necessitated frequent interviews at the house of the President. Every day, after the lapse of about an hour, the Count became uniasy, and showed anxiety to terminate the situag and return home. This impatition was quite inequilicable to his col-became unuses, and showed anxiety to terminate the situag and teturn home. This impatience was quite inexplicable to his colleague, who one day asked him the reason.

"My wife," replied Merin, "is in terror if I am absent a moment longer than usual."

"And why!" inquired Malchus.

Morio then related that the Countess had had her nativity once cast by Mademoisselle Lenormand, who had told her she would be married three times. Her first hashend would be a new acquintance, a lover whose love she reciprocated, by whom her highest wish would be gratified—the prospects of motherhood. She would toon, after a fire, recoive a distinguished guest in her house, and not long after lose her husband by a violent death. Matried a second time she would return to her native country, where she would in a short time lose her accord hasband and marry a third.

she would in a short time lose her second husband and marry a third.

"Come, Monsicur le Ministre," continued the Count, "do me the honor to accompany me home, and see for yourself." Malchus complied, and found the Count as in a state of suffering which her husband had not at all exaggerated. When she learned that he had been made acquainted with the ground of her apprehensions, steerid:

"You can judge, then, whether I have cause to tremble for my husband's life. In every other particular the prophecy has been verified. I did not know him nor he me; our marriage was of love; I am likely to become a mother; the fire has happened, and she distinguished guest been received. Do the distinguished guest been received. Do you wonder when I fear that a violent death my bushind is now near?"

The President did what he could to tranquiling the lady, assuring her that with bim, at least, the Count was safe, and that one more meeting would terminate the busi-ners which took her husband away from her.

The next day, Morio was with the Presi-The next day, Morio was with the President until eleven o'clock, and then rude out with the King. As they passed, on their return, through the rayal mews, Morio was detailed, and the King went on. On a sudden a shot was fired. The Counters heard it, and shrieked out: "My husband is killed!" It was too true. A French farrier, whom Morio had discharged for drunkenness, had makicipule killed him.

ness, had maliciously killed him.
Tals occurrence made a deep impression on Malchus. When he arrived in Paris, shoully after, he heard the name of Lenormand everywhere. She had predicted to Murat that he would be a King; to a Spanish officer that one week from that day he would hear of his brother's death in Spain; to the Counters Bochoiz that she would marry a Prince of the blood; to Dr. Spangenberg, Queen's physician, that he would receive certain important news next day, and that

"3. That of my surname.
"3. Of my soundry.
"4. Of the place of my birth.
"5. My age, and, if possible, day, hour, and minute of my birth.
"6. Name of my favorite flower.
"7. Name of my favorite animal.
"8. Name of sanimal of greatest repugnance to me.

nance to me,

"She now took fourteen packs of cardssome playing cards, others marked with necromantic figures and signs of celestial bodies —and shuffling each pack, asked me to cut them. Offering my right hand, she prevented me, saying, 'La main gauche, monsieur'.'
Out of each pack I drew a number of cards, Out of each pack I down number of cards, which she arranged in order. She then surveyed the palm of my left hand attentively, turned to a book of open hands, selecting one, studied the cards before her, and then began to tell me of my past, present, and future. Of the first she certainly told me much that ould not be known even by my nearest friends, much that had almost pussed from my own memory. Of the second, she told me with the same accuracy. Of the future, there was abyllice obscurity about some things; about others, clearness and unambiguity. For example: I had spoken of leaving Paris in two days. 'Your resterct encore deux mois a Paris!' she replied, fixing her eyes on mine. I might mention a score of similar remarks where she was equally positive and correct. In she was equally positive and correct. In short, at a distance of five years from the time of the interview, I frankly state that time of the interview, I frankly state that not one of her predictions, reasonably to be expected within that time, has failed."

Talma, Madame de Stael, Mademoiselle George, and Horace Vernet have each at different times given accounts of interviews with Mademoiselle Lenormand, agreeing that her predictions were not at random. Of the last she said, in 1800, that within thirty years he would stand so high as an artist that the King of France would send him to Africa to paint the storming of a fortreem there; which took place in 1839. As she had told Napoleon of his exite, she foretold Murat the place and time of his death twen-Murat the place and time of his death twenty years before it occurred. The Duchess of Gourland, a lady well known in the fashtienable world of her day, whose youngest daughter married Taileyrand's repliew, anotions an account more remarkable than that of President Malchus, but there is no time to refer to it here.

Turn we now to another branch of Mademoiselle Lendrmand's wonderful skill in occult science. Her oracular divinations of lucky numbers in a lotters three other ex-Murat the place and time of his death twenlucky numbers in a lotter; threw other ex-ploits into the shade. She ones declared to Potter, the comic actor, that one, two, and even three primes were avigned by destiny to every man; but that she could not tell to every man; but that she could not tell when and where any person's fortunate numbers were, without inspecting his hand. Potier, very maturally, asked what his own fortunate numbers were. Looking into his left hand and consulting her books, she replied: "Mark the numbers 9, 11, 37, and 85; stake on these—but not sooner than sixteen years bence—in the Imperial Lattery at Leons, and you will obtain a ouarterne." at Lyons, and you will obtain a quarterne."

This was in 1810. In 1826 Potter remembered the prediction, esched on the four numbers the rorceres had numed, and added a fifth, 27, the number of his bitthday. Old people in Patis talk to this day of the sensation produced when the five numbers Potter had in Paris talk to this day of the sensation produced when the five numbers Potier had set his money upon were drawn. He won 250,000 france—a sum which made a rich man of him, and when he died, in 1840, his heirs divided a million and a half.

Potier's good luck excited the desires of Tribet, an actor of few talents, but of many children. He flew to Lenormand; but she declined to answer. He besought her on his knees; but she remained inflexible. Mademoiselle rafused his hand, indeed; but only shook her head in silence, and left him. Tribet followed—represented how poor he was—"ceclared that his happiness was in Lenormand's hands—and urged that he was father of ten children, whom he could not educate, and about whose future he was in despatr. The Sibylreplied: "Do not desire to knew your numbers; if fortunate, you will abanden your profession, become a gambler, beggar your family, and commit suicide at last." Tribet bound himself by a solemn oath that he would never again play, and still continued to entreat. Overcome by the poor man's carnestness, Lenormand at length said: "I will tell you the numbers. More than that, I will tell you that one of them denotes the year of your death. It is 28. Another is 13, your name festival; a them denotes the year of your death. It is 28. Another is 13, your name festival; a third, 66, is the number of your star. There is still another number that is full of good luck for you, but—you once wounded your-self on the stage."
"I did so twelve years ago."
"Well, since the wound, that number can-

"But I know it," replied Tribet. "It is 7-a remarkable number to me all my life. At seven years of age, I came to Paris-seven weeks after, I entered the Royal Inattitute—at three times seven years old, I fell in love—my salary is 700 livres—and a man at number 7, on the boulevard, told me to come to you. It is my fortunate number." Good! Choose, then, 7 tor you quarterne: very likely this number will win also."

Tribet staggered from her presence like one drunk with joy. But he had not money enough to stake a large sum; and the pro-phetess had declared, as she did in all cases, that to stake borrowed money would not answer. The poor actor had only twenty france. He staked the whole. Tyrage arframes. He staked the whole. Twage arrived. Each of the four numbers came out not one failing. Tribet, who, the day heforehad not a son, found himself the possesso of 96 000 frames. He was mad with delight he rashed, hatless, through the streets; he told every one he met that he had become a capitalist, and he took a b.x at the theatre hear himself olds. capitalist, and he took a b.x at the theatre, to bear himself plsy. What Lenormand had prophesied came to pass. Good luck erased him. He abandoned his family, left for Leudon, became a constant guest at the hazard table, lest, committed suicide, and his body was recovered from the Thames. All this, too, in 1828!—the number she predicted as the year of his death.

This event was a terrible abock to Lenermand. She called herself Tribut's murderess, execuated her art, and for more than a mand. She called herself Tribet's murderess, executed her art, and for more than a year after steadily refused to divine numbers for the lottery.

In 1830, however, the following circumstances occurred:—A man, one day, hastily entered her cabinet, stating himself to be Pierre Arthur, a printer, and begging her intercession with Mossieur Jerome, his creditor, who was pursuing him with bailiffs. Jerome, with his attendants, followed him into the house. Lensmand readily undertook the office of intercessor, and appealed to the usurer's companion. It was in vain. The Sityl grew warm, and said bitter things. The oreditor retorted. Taunts followed. A scene, in which all the parties would have been implicated with the police, was threatening, when Mademoiselle Lengmand, controlling herself, took Jerome's left hand, and, studying its lines, said to Pierre Arthur: "If you posses five france of your own, not borrewed, "but honestly-owned money, go and stake it on 37, 87, and 88, in the Royal Lettery. The tirage is to-day. To-morrow you will be the possessor of 24,000 france." Pierre had not a sow. The baliffs estand and dragged him away. Jerome, however, replied: "Thunk you, Mademoiselle; I learn for the first time my fortunate numbers, and will profit by them." The sorceress had but one recourse. To her, prizes in the lottery were denied. If the numbers designated become hers, they would not be drawn. She instantly sent her servant to secure the three numbers; and the result was, the disappointment of Jerome—but not the release of Pierre Arthur.

Jerome—but not the release of Pierre Arthur.

Eight days before the death of Louis XVIII., Lenormand gave the following five numbers as destined to come out at the next drawing: First, the number of the King's age, 68; the number of years he had reigned, 36; the year of the entry of the allies into Paris, 14; the day the King had ascended the throne, 26; and the number affired to his name in the list of the sovereigns of France, 18. All the numbers were made public. The prediction had been a topic of port at the salons. The numbers were known, paraded in handbills, published in newspapers, long before secured, and so much talked about as to be in every body's month. Residents in Paris, in September, 1824, well remember the rurprise, as directors of the lottery remember the reckoning, when it was announced that the five numbers, named by Mademoiselle Lenormand—68, 36, 14, 26, and 18—had drawn the principal prizes.

68, 36, 14, 26, and 18—had drawn the principal prizes.

The Countess de Normandy says: "In 1800, Mademoiselle Lenermand, entirely ignorant of me, during an interview of an hour, predicted what has followed within twenty years: my preservation of the lives of three state prisoners; my acquaintance with Lord Byron; my journey to Italy, at the request of Pope Leo XII.; my Maltess crow, and my visit to Paris. I learned one leason from that horocope, and that was, never again to pry into the secrets of futurity."

The writer saw Mademoiselle Lenormand never again to pry into the secrets of futurity."

The writer saw Mademoiselle Lenormand nineteen years ago. She was then past seventy-nine, and appeared still older. Her immense frame, well covered with adipose flesh, was a good deal bowed down, and her gait unsteady. She leaned heavily upon a cane. Her hair was of snowy whiteness, and fell in masses of earls upon the rich moire antique silk and Valenciennes lace she wore. She spoke in tones remarkably soft and clear, without any of the piping or quavering of old age, and her eyes—black and piercing—seemed to retain all the brilliancy of their youth, She revided in a handsome and well-furnished dwelling; kept carriage, horses, and liveried servants; and still practised her occult profersion. Her reputation then was certainly not what it had been during the days of the Empfre; but many persons consulted her, and those mostly of the upper classes. Besides her ordinary questions, she asked, at this time; "Do you prefer to go up or down!" "Does a height make you disary?" "Have you, in moments of coolness, ever desired to die?" Her gnesses—if guesses they were—of past personal history were certainly remarkable, and her predictions of the future have been wonderfully verified. It is not germane to the question of her gifts as to how she knew the life of a stranger—an American—in the past. There it a possibility, never so remote, of collusion. But hew did she foresee that the time-hurried traveller, who was asking her questione; would remain a decade of years in Europe; that a great civil war would call him back to his own country; that the nearest in blood to him would pass through loss and suffering te honor; and that out of the dregs of his prople the questioner would live to see one rise who would become the leader of his nation? The writer can only say that years have fulfilled all that Mademoiselle Lenormand predicted to him The writer saw Mademoiselle Lenormand can only say that years have fulfilled all that Mademoiselle Lonormand predicted to him nearly twenty years ago.

We have said that our Sibyl was alive last We have said that our Sibyl was alive last November. She was then ninely eight years old. Our informant represents her as decrepit, bowed almost double, deaf, toothless, nearly blind, fremulous, palsied on one side, and wholly inespable of locomotion. "But," he addy, "she is the sorceress still. Carriages wait at her door. Ladies of rank frequent her boudoir. The remarkable predictions she makes are more remarkable predictions she makes are more remarkably verified. I dare not write what she told Madame Vernon was to be the future of the Emperor. If it should prove true—which now seems impossible—the parallel which now seems imp between the nephew and his uncle would be complete."

What has been here narrated is authentic. What has been here narrated is authentic. It is a problem for the psychologists. They fathom animal magnetism. Let them try their plummet in the mysteries of the palm and the stars. No mist is impenetrable to modern thinkers—no millstone opaque.

Of Mademoiselle Lenormand let me say, in conclusion, this is true: Bhe seeks trath in the stars, as geologists seek it in the rocks, or mathematicians in figures. Bhe contrived to be believed in during an age of her earlier in the stars, as geologists seek it in the rocks, or mathematicians in figures. She contrived to be believed in during an age of her earlier years, when there was no faith in God or His angels, in the devil or his impa. Only the other day, when a laborer was killed by a fall from the Corse in Boune, his fellow-workman, leaving the corpse and running to comult his "Book of Dr. ams." invested instantly fifteen bejecchi in the lottery, on the corresponding numbers to paura, saugue, cascata—fear, blood, fall—and wen a prise of three hundred. The world will not be robbed of its theathenism. There was no monopoly to the old Roman harvepices. And as to the art of Mademoiselle Lenormand, whether it be mete chance, or undiscovered properties of numbers, or real understanding with the invisible world—which we leave the reader to comider—it is evident that the time-bonored trade in human credulity is not among the things that are past.—Over-land Monthly.

HUNGARIAN ELOQUENCE.—During a recent tour through Hungary, Ectvos, the Minister, was harangued by various "Stuhltichter," and to judge from a few specimens, Hungarian eloquence is a fearful thinz. Thus George Paulovvice addressed his Excellency in these terms:—"We see the star arise which Hits our nation up to the level of the times. Were I endowed with Samson's power, I would tear the biggest oak from the mountains and dip it even as a jess into the flaming orb of the sun in order to put down with indelible features your Excellency's name for the benefit of those who hate the light."

THE SISTERS.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Annie and Rhoda, sisters twain, Woke in the night to the sound of sais,

The rush of wind, the ramp and roar. Of great waves climbing a rocky shore.

Annie rose up in her bed gown white, And looked out into the storm and night.

" Husb, and hearken!" she cried in fear,

"Hearest thou nothing, sister dear? "I hear the sea, and the plash of rais, And roar of the north-east hurricane.

"Get thee back to the bed so warm, No good comes of watching a storm.

"What is it to thee, I fain would know, That waves are roaring and wild winds blow?

The harbor-lights on a night like this."

"But I heard a voice cry out my name, Up from the sea on the wind it came!

"Twice and thrice have I heard it call, And the voice is the voice of Estwick Hall!" On her pillow the sister towed her head. "Hall of the Heron is safe," she said.

"In the tautest schooner that ever swam He rides at anchor in Anisquam.

"And, if in peril from swamping sea Or lee shore rocks, would be call on thee?" But the girl beard only the wind and tide, And writering her small, white hands, she cried—

"Oh, sister Rhoda, there's something wrong; I hear it again, so loud and long.

"Annie! Annie!' I hear it call, And the voice is the voice of Estwick Hall! Up sprang the elder, with eyes sflame, "Thou liest! He never would call thy

"If he did, I would pray the wind and sea To keep him forever from thee and me!"

Then out of the sea blew a dreadful blast; Like the cry of a dying man it passed.

The young girl bushed on bor lips a gross But through her tears a strange lip

The aoleum joy of her heart's release To own and cherish its love in peace.

"Dearest!" she whispered, under breath, "Life was a lie, but true is death.

"The love I bid from myself away Shall crown me now is the light of day.

"My ears shall never to wooer list, Never by lover, my lips be kissed.

"Sacred to thee am I henceforth, Thou in Heaven and I on earth!"

She came and stood by her sister's bed: "Hall of the Heron is dead!" she said.

"The wind and the waves their work have done, We shall see him no more beneath the sun.

"Little will reck that heart of thine, It loved him not with a love like mine,

"I, for his sake, were he but here, Could hem and 'broider thy bridal gear,

"Though hands should tremble and eyes be

And stitch for stitch in my heart be set.

"But now my soul with his soul I wed; Thine the living, and mine the dead!"

—Atlantic Monthly.

Out in the Streets.

A STORY FOR CHRISTMAS. BY MRS. HENRY WOOD,

Author of "EAST LYNNE," "BESSY RANE," de., de.

A commodicus house, standing within ita large welled garden, near to Kensington: and the time the first half of the year 1866. The bay-window stood open to the lawn: you could step out from it at will. Seated at the breakfast table, its fair white cloth at the breakless table, its fair white cloth spread with pretty china and silver, was Rubert Beaton: a slender man of middle height, and very picasant, but rather sensi-tive face; his age some seven-and-twenty years.

His wife was opposite to him. She wore a blue muelin gown, and they were laughing over it. It had abrunk in the washing: the sleeves were short; the waist would not come together by any dint of pulling. Mrs. Seaton had secured it with plas, but there shone a great gap.

"I must say it looks admirably tidy," observed Mr. Seaton. "Quite a pattern to be atudied."

"Be quiet, Robert. Had I stayed to put on another, you would have had to wait for breakfast. Who was to suppose it would shrink like this! And so pretty as it was! Recoming. t.o."

shrink like this:

Becoming, two."

"Don't be vain, Anne."

She laughed a little. He went on with his breakfast, glancing ever and snon at the May flowers, springing up in the garden beds. The sua shous down, the grass was green, the young leaves wore their delicate and most beautiful tint; the blessoms green, the young leaves what cate and most beautiful tint; the blessoms were of a gay sweetness.

"I forgot to tell you, Anne," he suddenly exclaimed, looking up at his wife, "Charles has got his company.

"Has he! How do you know?"

"I read it yesterday in the Indian news."

"Oh." returned Mrs. Scaton—and there was a shade of disappointment in her tone,
"I thought—perhaps—"

"Perhaps what?"

"That they might have written to tell

"That they might have written to tell you from Beaton Farm."
"No fear of that, Anne. They don't write to me. Never mind, my dear. We can do without it."

can do without it."

Mrs. Seaton gently pushed back her pretty brown hair—a habit of hers when thoughtful or vexed. The hair was of nearly the same shade as her husband's: but his open were brown, hers gray. She had delicate features and a clear, healthy, sensible face: otherwise these was not much heauty in it he heart of 3000

SCORE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE P

was at the door. Robert Seaton, remarkably punctual in regard to his business hours, was ready for it.

"Good-by, my dear."

Steoping to kiss his wife, he fouched the gap in the blue gown quite eatirically, and sughed. She said it would be made right before the morrow: but he whispered that he thought he must bring her a new one from town. Paul, a young gentleman of three with great gray eyes, was descending the stairs, his nume behind him. Robert Seaton caught him up, tossed him, kissed him, put him down again, and went cut to his carriage.

Mrs. Seaton, busy with her little ones, her servants, her household matters generally, and with some friends who came to see her, passed through the day much as mual. One of them, hims Barle, stayed to dinner. Robert Seaton was late for it—a very unusual thing—and they sat down alone. Close upon that, the brougham was heard driving in with him. He passed up-stairs to his dressing-room: and certainly did not seem to hurry himself when there.

"Wantkept you, Robert?" asked his wife, when he appeared.

"Businers, he shortly answered.

"What kept you, Robert?' asked his wife, when he appeared.

"Businers, he shortly answered.

Miss Barie; a tail, angular, suncy-hearted maiden of eight-and-thirty, who protested she'd not get married, though the bost man in Christendom came to beg her on his kness; talked and laughed as was her wont. People were spit to may that when Elizabeth Barla was present, nobody also could get in a word edgeways. Nevertheless, before the dinner was over, Mr. Scaton remarked that her husband was unusually silent, and seut away his plate each time mearly untouched.

"Is anything the matter, Robert!"

"The matter? Oh, my head aches a little."

"The matter? Oh, my head aches a little."

He sat back on the sofa in the drawing-room, still as death. Miss Barle saked him to sing. He came forward at once, and sank a seng, and then another that they opened for him, Mrs. Seaton playing. But he seemed to do it all mechanically, his wife thought; as though his mind was pre-seeupled; and she could not make it out. Robert Scaton's voice was a very attractive one—full of aweet melody. They could have listened to it for hours. But he sat down again, saying he had had a tising day in the city, and relapsed into revery.

At bed-time, after Miss Barle had left, and Mrs. Seaton had gone on up-stairs, he rose from his seat, like a man released from some restraining fetters, to pace the room with uneven steps. His face was full of care, his mind of doubt and ageny. A frightful trouble had fallen on Robert Seaton, and he knew not bow to tell har wife. He decided not to tell har: perhaps it mighs not turn out so badly as it threatened.

In the morning, after tossing and turning all night like a man in a fever, he went off

Barie. That lady finished in a whisper, "The Great Loan and Discount' must fail

For two or three minutes there ensued a

For two or three minutes shere eshed a silence: the two women sitting together side by side, neither during to speak. "I am not sure that I should have come in, but that I thought assuredly your bus-band must have told you," resumed Miss Barle, with hesitation. "I came to ask you Barle, with hesitation. for news—hoping to gather a grain or two of comfort. I thought you might know that— perhaps—he might have made himself a perhaps—he might have made himself a little safe: also me. Poor me!"

But Mrs. Seaton had not one single grain of comfort to give. Her senses seemed to be in a chaor, her mind was in a state of be-wilderment. All she could long for now was to see her nusband, that she might learn the best and the worst.

est and the worst.

Before the day was over, other friends had called, dismay on their countenances, wild stories of ruin on their tongues; and bearing the most improbable rumors of the unexampled panic in the city. At least, they sounded improbable to Mrs. Seaton's terey came and went, these callers, and would bring on their own individual selves.

Mr. Seaton could not move till they did.
There was no concealment from his wife now; with his aching bend leaning on his band, underneath the lights, he told her all.
"Robert," she said, catching up her breath, "can nothing be done to avert it?"
He shook his head. "The house is already closed."
"What will be the ending?"
In his heart's bitterness Robert Seaton ready closed."

"What will be the ending?"
In his heart's bitterness Robert Seaton could have laughed ironically at the question. The ending? Neither he nor any other man could foresee that.

"Miss Barle was hoping that perhaps you had been able to take care of her, Robert."

"Ay, I daresay. Others will be thinking the same: my father amidst them. His case—for me—will be the worst of all."

"It will be utter rain, Elizaboth Barle mays. It will mean going out of house, and home, and everything. Every shilling she had, you know, was put into the Great Loan and Discount Company."

"Every shilling that I have is in it too."

Mrs. Seaton know it well.

"It is an awful time," he resumed; "a nearly universal wreck. Associations, supposed to be stable, banks, private firms—all are falling together. The panie in the city to-day has been something frightful."

"But, Robert, what has led to it?"

What had led to it? Robert Seaton was not preserved to answer the question.

"But, Robert, what has led to it?"
What had led to it? Robert Seaton was not prepared to answer the question. As yet he scarcely maderatoed himself. It had been a go-ahead age for some years past. The world, throwing off its old jog-trot pace, had been rashing along on whicks. People had not been content to plod on slowly and perseveringly to riches, as the old caston was, but had leaped into them with a spring. Gigantic companies had been organized, banks had been started, mysterious offices had been despised; cast to the whole: capitalists, whether small or large; retired officers; old ladies and young, possessing a few thousands, must get their six, seven, eight—geodréss knows how much more per cest, for their money. Young men beginning life, had set up their households on a grand scale, and driven to town in their broughams; their fathers, ten times more really wealthy then they are the construction. and driven to town in their brougasms; their fathers, ten times more really wealthy than they were, taking the omnibus still. With so much money coming is universally for a short while, it could not be but that foundations should totter. And a general collapse had supervened.

The truths suggested themselves dimly to The truths suggested themselves dimly to Robert Seaton. A sage gentleman had propounded them in his hearing that day, at the board-table of the Great Loan and Discount Company. Robert Seatos supposed it might have been so: he had not quite formed his opinion. He had been one of the many to reap large bonehis and go ahead: and he could not make mure or less of it than that if he tried forever.

They sat up talking the best part of the night, he and his wife. Perhaps there were many more households in London that miscrable night, ruined as they were, who did the same.

Great Loan and Discount Company had stood on sound and firm lege—and that it was the breaking up of other and larger concerns that had involved it in sudden and unfore-seen ruin. The most civil retort made to him was—that he ought to have foreseen it.

him was—that he ought to have foreseen it.

How Robert Seaton bore through the weeks that ensued, he scarcely knew; the time would lie on his mind for years as something to be abunded at. For he was time would lie on his mind for years as something to be abuidated at. For he was a sensitive-natured man, of high principles, and would not willingly have wronged or misled his neighbor. But he got the credit of having done it. Ruined men; ay and women, too, told him to his face that he was dishonorable, dishonest, next door to a third. They overlooked the fact that he was more completely ruined than they were. It was very hard to bear.

He had to go out of his home a penniless man, with the stigms of insolvency attaching to him. He was personally liable for certain claims connected with the once flourishing company, and his furniture and effects were ruthlessly seized to satisfy, so far as they would, the demands. Poor mas! Poor wife! Poor little children!

They came and went, these callers, and the day were on with its accustomed soutine. Household arrangements were uninterrupted; meal-times came round, and the table was apread. In the midst of our greatest word, but a gentieman's estate. Notwithist all seemed to the heart of the stricken wife, waiting and wastching in her suspense. His c'clock, and the dinner waiting; but no master came bome to eat it. The brougham réturned without them. Seeme c'clock: adding them the did of the Beston family. Paul Seaton was now of the father of Bobert) lived there. He had acrept to the half door, to watch and listen. All kinds of dreadful improbabilities kept surging through her brain. Had he did of the shock; the shock; the shock; the shock is the shock; the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock; the shock is the shalf door, to watch and intended a year, all told. His surging through her brain. Had he did of the shock; the shock; the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock; the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the blow been the shock is the shalf and the shock seade him quit his lodgings and take up his abode with them for the time being; he had been loved and indulged by them always. During this sojourn—they had a farnished house near Eaton Square—Robert fell into trouble. That is, into love: which in his case came to the same thing. The young lady, Anne Elliot, was a governess in a neigh-boring household; and she had nothing what-ever to recommend her save her good face, ever to recommend her anye her good face, and her good principles. A most desirable girl with money; old Mr. Seaton might have acknowledged that; without it, one not to be noticed or looked at.

There ensued some tribulation. When it came out that Robert Seaton had made the acquaintance of this neighboring girl, and asked her to mary him, Mr. Seaton and his daughters were dumb with horror. A governess!—for Robert Seaton! And one without a penny-piece!

his daughters were dumb with horror. A governeas!—for Robert Beaton! And one without a penny-piece!

It ended in an estrangement. A parting. And Mr. Beaton assured his son that it would be for life. Robert would not give up Anne Elliot. The tamily in which she taught, by way of showing their opinion of the fitness of things, turned the young lady away. Robert civily demanded his portion from his father—three thousand pounds—and married her. The money was Robert's own. Mr. Beaton did not attempt to keep it from him: he shook his hands of Robert and the meney together, and took unto himself merit for so doing.

"I do not wish you to come altogether to the dogs, Robert season," he said, his cold eyes averted, bis cold voice wearing its hardest tone, "therefore I hand you over jour fortuse. Put out to proper interest, it will bring you in one handred and fifty pounds per annum. You can centive to live upon that, if you choose, while you make way is your profession. Only—do not attempt to keep up any intercourse with me or my family; and remember that you will never have any assistance from me or mine. Honceforth we are strangers."

Anne Elliot—Anne Se aton then—thought the bundred and fifty would be ample for thom, if they were economical—and she would take ours of that. But Robert Seaton made a different nee of the money. The Great Loan and Discount Company, then would take care of that. But Robert Seaton made a different use of the money. The Great Loar and Discount; Company, then being set up, came is his way. He was told it would be a grand thing; he thought it would be, and he threw has services and his three thousand pounds into it. So he abandoned his study for the Bar, and never was called constructions of the construction of the const to Bobert, was more bitter than all.

But it was in truth a serious affair for Mr.

Seaton. Gaining more, he had been spending more: and had allowed his eldest son, who was in India, to draw upon him rather largely. He quitted Seaton Farm, letting the house, but not the land: that remained under the charge of Rouse, the faithful steward. The family retired to the Conti-ment; where they might live at as small a cost as they pleased, and indulge their bitter animosity against the scapegrace, Robert. Thus from two to three years went on.

The fire was getting low in the shabby lit-tle sitting-room. A lady, her gown faded and wern, sat sewing fast by the light of a solitary candle, a weary look on her attenuated face. The house was on the outskirts of London, towards the south; its neighborhood, bearing the reputation of being "genteel," as well as obeap.

The clock in the passage below—for this room was on the first floor—struck the bour.

Nine. At the same moment, the front door opened, and foot-teps entered the passage. She glanced up to listen, an expectant look on her pale face. But no: the steps did not

The handle of the door was turned and twisted by inexperienced hands, and a little girl of four, with bright eager eyes and fair flowing carls, came bounding into the room.

"Dood merning, pa-pa; dood morning, mam-ma! Kies Annie! They were ready always, the father especially, to devour with hisses this their first-bora ohid. Hobert Seaton took her on his knee, and fendly stroked her bair.

"Ware's Paul?" he asked presently.

"Paul been naughty," said the child, whose tongue was backward for her age.

"Ware's Paul?" he asked presently.

"Paul been naughty," said the child, whose tongue was backward for her age.

"Nurse not let him come. He trew his bread-batter in de fender."

A servant qume in to say the brougham was at the door. Robert Seaton, remarkably punctual in regard to his butters hour, was needly for its.

"Good-by, my dear."

"Stooping to kiss his wife, he fouched the Stooping to kiss his wife, he fouched the condensation and many the prompts of the blac caves outle against it?

"Water will not the blac caves outle against it?

"Robert," she said, catching up here bours, was ready for its.

"Good-by, my dear."

"Stooping to kiss his wife, he fouched the same landing?"

"Water will be the ending?"

"A servent query eyes and fair into the hear but eventually chose the latter in a half-lave to get his living in right earnest, hesitated between farming—which he understant between farming—which he understant between farming—which he latter to get his for charles; Robert, who would be lave to get his living in right earnest, hesitated between farming—which he lave to use of the latter have to get his living in right earnest, hesitated between farming—which he understant between farming—which he understant between farming—which he understant be latter to get his for charles; Robert, who would be lave to get h "Is will do nicely for him, poor little fellow."

Putting some coal on the fie—but not much; for coal was no more plentiful with them than were other luxuries—she mayed quietly about, setting things straight, when a baby's cry was heard from the next room. She strove to hush the child to sleep again by gently rocking his cradie. But, hely-like, he would not be hushed; and Mrs. Seaton bad to take him up and quiet him in another way. After laying him down again, she passed into a small spartment, no larger than a closet, on the same landing, and looked at the two children sleeping there: a little girl between six and seven, a boy younger. Scarcely was she back again by the fire when Robert Scaton came in.

Ah, how he had altered! She was changed; but not as he way. The step was listless, the face haggard. The once bright hair had thinned at the temple.

"Robert, I thought you must have been lost," she exclaimed, as he flung himself into a chair.

"I have been to Holloway," he answered.
"There was an advertisement in the paper this moraing, for some one to assist

"There was an advertisement in the paper this morning, for some one to assist a tradesman there for a few weeks to send out Christmas accounts and post his books: ap-plication to be made after six o'clock in the avening."

"Did you get it?" she inquired, her tone unconsolously taking a sound of hope.

"No. Some one had been there before me. I am dead tired, Ause."

"But—you did not walk all the way hack?"

back?"

"Every step of it. And there also."

Bhe laid a tray-cloth across half the table, put two cups upon it, the loaf, and some butter. Pray don't think they were fashionable people, going to tea at this fashionable hour. It was tea and supper in one: ay and sometimes for Robert Seaton, diamer too, this meal.

"I am very sorry, Robert," she sighed, "I could not get any meat to-day. The butcher would not trust me."
"What did you have for dinner?" he gently asked.

"Oh, we managed," was the rather evative reply. "The children had some nice boiled rice and treacie. See, R. b. rt; I have fluiched Paul's pelisse. Won't it be warm for him?"

Hobert Seaton nodded as she held it out, but answer made he none. He was nearly broken in spirit and in heart, this man. Perhaps he could not bear misfortune bravely. Some can; and newer show it.

"I think I am almost too tired to en', Anne."

"Robert, you must. You must eat. Why, you would break down utterly, if you did

"Hobert, you must. You must eat. Why, you would break down utterly, if you did not."

She poured out the tea. He ent some bread and butter for her, and a thick crust for himself. They hagan talking of the badness of times. So very many men of the better classes were out of smployment, engineers especially. It had been the case ever ence that deplorable panic, two years and a half ago.

"As I came through the shop at Holloway to-night, after speaking to the proprietor in his box of a counting-house, there were ten or a dozen men waiting in it, on the same crush abalf had gone," he observed, as he slowly spread a modicum of butter on his crush. "Home of them, I am sure, were gentlemen. If a post of any hind offers, fifty are ready to snap it up, no matter how inferior it may be. We are too thick on the ground, that's the fact."

Their present position seemed very hopeless. Mrs. Beaton turned her face to from the fire. Her eyes had filled with tears, and she would have hidden them from him. He saw, for all that.

"Don's Anne. Crying will not mend it."
"If I could see an ending to it," she answered, letting the tears trickle down. "If I could only see what the end will be, and when it will come. We cannot go on like this forever. And I.—I am not able to help. My strength seems as if it would not return to me."

He knew why; knew it all too well: that me."

He knew why; knew it all too well: that the nourishment she took was not of the right kind, or sufficient for her. And there was that great healthy, hungry baby! Robert Seaton ventured on an uneual word of cheating.

"Something will turn up, Anne. Don't you despair." I shall not do that until I lose my faith in God."

She put away the traces of the supper, her husband leaning forward gloomily over the ecrap of fire, noticing nothing. When he looked round, she was sitting quietly, faith in God. Robert?"

It was one of the old-fashioned moulds, cheaper than the newer composites; and, as Mrs. Acaton thought, giving a better light. As he obsyed, he asked her whether she need work again to-night; she seemed to be always at work, Where the wardrobe of Yee, always. Where the wardrobe of children cashed be suitably replenished, only those who have experienced it can know what time and labor it costs to keep the old things in barely decent order. With a faint laugh, Mrs. Seaton held to his view the sock on her fingers: a heap of darns, a heap

There is so much to do for them, Robert, I have to make use of every spare moment,"
He turned his face to the fire again.
Heaven knew how bitterly all this told on Robert Seaton. And he was powerless to alter it, To himself he would often present the image of a man with, metaphorically speaking, his wings clipped.

"In three days it will be Christons Day, Robert," she said in a half-timid tone, break-

Robert," she said in a half-timid tone, breaking the silence. She did not like to add "And what shall we do?"—she did not say "Is there any chance of Christmas cheer for us?" But he understood her, "You will have some money to morrow evening, Anne. I happened to meet John Hadcock to-day in the Strand; and he promised to lend me a severeign or two it I'd Hadcock to-day in the Strand; and he pro-mised to lend me a severeign or two it I'd call in at his office to-morrow. It will tide could. Ged must have kept them; must have provided food and accessaries day by day—that is the best they can say. And well for a'l if they say is from the heart.

PORTO

After they had been driven from their happy home—peanliess, save for a few personal trifles, that were afterwards turned into small sams of money at need—Robert Seaton was seized with a very serious illness. It left him too shattered for a long while to do anything. A case like this brings out the wife's energies—if she possesses any. Mrs. Seaton got together a few pupils and taught them music; and so carsed a little money. Seaton to together a few pupils and taught them music; and so carned a little money. She vectured to write to Mr. Seaton, (en-closing the letter to his London bankers, for she did not know his address) telling him of the sick state of his son. After some time the letter was returned to her by Mr. Seaton they knew his hand-writing on the envelope, which hore a foreign post-mark-returned without a word.

They hid existed in some way; contriving

velope, which nore a lorege potential targed without a word.

They had existed in some way; contriving to keep up an appearance of respectability. Rubert Seaton had been unable to get into anything, good or bad, high or low, though he sought to do it with all his best energies. Too many, like himself, were out of employment; men were jostfling each other. It is true; as the world knows. Now and again, some friend, who had known him in better days, would assist him with a little money—a loan, to be paid back if good times ever came again. But this assistance was but rare: Robert Scaton was one of those sensitive men who cannot ask without feeling the deepest pain and humiliation. A repulse to him seemed worse than death; and he had to experience it again and again. Few are willing to lend, especially to one who is falles. And so the time had gone on some-how: he getting a little, Mrs. Seaton a little by her music pupils. Tooy had had to change their home every few months, each time falling lower in the social ladder. In the present house they had this small first floor and the use of the back kitchen.

It had been soon after they entered on it, that an additional misfortune fell upon them—the birth of the baby. It stopped Mrs. Seaton's teaching—for she was very ill, and continued so. She could not get out to her pupils (poor pupils at the best, and scantily paid for;) they did not ceme to her, for ahe had no piano. The very fact of their being in so prospectiese a condition made her fret; and that was not the best way to gain strength. The child was two months old now, and she only seemed to get weaker.

"It has come to that pass that I don't and that was not the best way to gain attength. The child was two months old now, and she only seemed to get weaker.

"It has come to that pass that I don't mind what I do," mustered Robert Seaton, reviewing all these miseries over his freless grate.

"It break stones is the road if I could only get a living at it." Others have said it before him.

John Hatcock's promised help of a soverign or twe did not come. When Robert Seaton called, as by appointment, he was told that Mr. Hadcock had left town for a few days. Was it true?—or only an excuse? He had got to doubt these answers. On Christmas Eve be mustered up his courage to apply to some one else—who had assisted him before and never turned a deaf ear. But this gentleman really was out of town; had this gentleman really was out of town: had gone, his clerk said, until the following Tuesday. And so that application was also

Tuesday. And so that application was also fruitiess.

Sick at heart, fainting in spirit, weary of foot, Robert Seaton set out to retrace his steps homewards. What was he to do?—he might not steal; he did not like to beg; it appea ed that he could not borrow. The basy streets were full that afternoon: eager crowds jostled him. Gay shops displayed their tempting Christmas wares; men and women pressed round the windows to gaze, and flocked in and out with their purchases. All seemed to have plenty of money; all save he. He had about two shillings in his pooket, counting up halfpence and farthings: and he knew not whence in the wide world to get the wherewithal to buy a bit of duner for them on the morrow, with the other necessaries to tide over Christmas Day and Sunday. He began ransacking his brains, as to whether there was anything left to them worth pledging—that he might provide it in that way. And he believed there was not. A ragged man and child were singing in the road: even they seemed to have money given them. He saw a sixpence too-sed—the donor was a fat weman in a red shawl, with a backet on her arm—he saw pence: people open their hearts to the poor at Christmas. Only he seemed destitute—be, the apparent gentleman, walking along at his case.

"Oh, papa, papa! mamma's ill. She's tute—be, the apparatus along at his case.

"Oh, papa, papa! mamma's fill, She's lying on the bed with her eyes shut."

The words greated him as he entered the house. His pretty little girl, her fair hair flying behind her, came sobbing down the st-dirs to speak them. Paul stood on the top st-dirs to speak them. Paul stood on the top st-dirs to speak them. stairs to speak them. Paul stood on the top with a stolid face: the boy hardly knew what was the meaning of the bustle; what not.

"What do you say is the matter with mamma, Annie?" he asked, hastening up.
"She fell down on the floor; she can't speak," answered the child. "Mr. Tarn is Weakness, or some accession of illness had made Mrs. Seaton faint. The trightened children called up the people below; and they, finding she did not come to, ran for the

She began to revive as Robert entered.

Mr. Tarn was the medical man who had been recently attending her,—and he was not paid yet. Before quisting, when she had come round, and was sitting up, he spoke a few words aside in the husband's ear.

"Mr. Seaton, your wife must have better.

result."
Let ber have them! Why, he would have Let ber have them! Why, he would have given them to ber with his heart's best blood? But how? How procure them? He bent his head in bitter perplexity, sitting forwards. The fire was blasing just thee, and lighted up his worn, haggard, but still most refused face. The shades of evening had draws on, and the room had no light save the fire. Annie sat on the carpet holding the baby across her lap; Paul played with a tailless horse out of Nosh's ark. Mr. Seaton was askeep on the bed in the other room, after taking a cordial procured for her. "I am to have my new polises on to-morrow if paps takes me for a walk," spoke Paul saddenly. "Mamma mid so." Could Paul have discerned the frightful idea that the word suggested to his father, he might have been struck into his above with inetgration. That newly-made polises; would it not pledge for a shilling or test." I want my ten," sait Paul, again.
"Whom mamma gets up," reproved wise little Annie. "Don't be impatient, sir."

49.000A

"Hush, children!" exclaimed Robert Sestes, in a whisper. "You will wake mamma. We must be quiet and let her sleep, you know, that she may get well."
And they sat on agair. The blane went down; the room darkened. Pondering upon this and thea, a thought dawned upon Robert Seaton's mind, and did not go away again. At first he mentally derided it for its utter absurcity; its wild impracticability.
But, as we all know, dwelling on a thing softens its asperities down; and Robert Seaton ended by asking himself.—Should he do this?

Should be go icto the streets that Christmae Eve night and sing for money ?—as he had seen the ragged man do in the after noon. It might return a better harvest than Paul's pelisse: if he could only bring his pride to it."

pride to it."
The inner door was gently pushed open, and Mrs. Seaton entered, her face pale, her steps tottering. Robert hastened to her.
"My dear, you should not have got off the I am well now," she said with a smile.

"I am well now," she said with a smile.
"How quiet you have all been."
He placed her in a chair. The children kissed her. Baby woke up then—as a matter of course—and had to be taken by its mamma. After tea the children went to bed; the baby was laid in his crib. By that time, busy with one thing and another, Robert Seaton had arrived at the conclusion that his notion was only fit for a man insane.

that his notion was only fit for a man insanc that his notion was only fit for a man in-sane. Atumping up the stairs came the greengioner. He wanted the money owing for the coals sent in that morning. Hobert could only give promises; and the man said an uncivit word or two—about gentletoiks living at ease on honest folks' work. The matter upset him. When the man had gone he leaned his elbow on the mantel-piece, dreadfully depressed. All the worst of his position, and in an exaggerated form, wared him full in the face; he felt as it is must give up to deeperation. What M. Scaton saw in his countrance struck a nameless terror to her.

saw in his countenance struck a nameless terror to her.

"Hobert," she softly said, with a catching-up of the breath, "don't, don't despair. God will surely remember us if we only bear up and stust in Him."

"I don't thick He seems to do much for us," was the callous answer—but in truth he was nearly beside himself, and all beart and spirit had sone out of him. "We have been waiting for help of some kind or other rather long."

rather long."
"Robert! Robert! Oh, don't—don't lon your best faits!" was ber imploring cry.
"It would kill me. As long as you bear up.

I can."

He caught her hand in his, and stood with his arm round her. Stood for some minutes, saying nothing; only looking into the fire, and thinking. "May God give me strength to do this thing!" was his mental conclusion.

to do this thing I" was his mental conclusion.

"But where are you going, Robert?"—for he was moving to the door.

"Only on an errand, my dear. I'll not be longer than I can help."

"But where—where?" she cried, stepping up to him—and he detected a strange anxiety in her eves and tone.

up to him—and he detected a strange anxiety in her eyes and tone.

"To see about some dinner for to-morrow. Indeed, i'il be back as soon as I can."

Kissing her as fondly as ever he had done in their happier days, he passed down the stairs, flinging over his shoulders a dark cloth cape of his. It looked better than it was, for the moths had filled it with small holes—as might be seen when held up to the light. He had tried to pledge it once and the pawnbroker would not take it in. With this cape draws well up, and his broadthis case drawn well up, and his broad brimmed hat drawn well down, he was no readily recognisable.

Robert Seaton was going out in the streets to sing. He had brought his courage to the point. Under the shades of night, and wrapped up from observation, he felt that he would do it. It might bring him in a little harvest of silver. Whatever else had lost, he had not lost his sweet voice for singing.

ologing.

Onwards he pressed. Up one street, down Onwards he pressed. Up one street, down another; neurer and nearer to the great town. Turning into a quiet road, where a row of handsome houses faced some trees on the opposite side, he thought here might be a good place to begin. The houses were most of them ablaze with light: happy families within had assembled to usher in Caristmas. In the drawing-room of the first, the blinds were up, and he could see a couch placed close to the window, and a gentleman lying on it. Yee, this was undoubtedly as favorable a spot as any. lying on it. Yee, this was undoubtedly as favorable a spot as any.

Robert Seaton's heart was beating and thumping as though he were about to com-mit a crime. He could not raire his voice to begin. It is a fact. For full ten minutes he howered about there in hesitating timulity. And then he mentally called himself hard names, and strove to imagine himself a real street-singer, and to take somfort in the thought that those who beard would never dream of his being anything else.

All the way, coming along, be had been deliberating want be should commence with Not with one of the frivolons modern song -as too many of them are; he could not have brought his aching heart to it. So he broke forth idto one of the old melodies that must always be welcome,

It was a double-room, this lighted draw-ing-room where the blinds were up. Beyond the folding-doors, standing only half open, four people sat at whist: an elderly gening-room where the blinds were up. Beyond the folding doors, standing only half open, four people sat at whist: an elderly gentleman and his three daughters. Another daughter stood by the fire talking with a very young man, an ensign in the army. The gentleman on the sofa in the front room was ill, and liked to lie in as much quiet as might be. He had come home from india invalided; and his fatter and sisters hastened from the Coatinent to receive and nurse him. That was a month or two ago. A tall, fine man he looked, lying there; but the limbs were wasted, the face was sharp with suffering. The young lady not playing cards came in quietly and approached him. She was motherly-looking; five-and-thirty years of age at least.

"Chailes, dear, are you sure you will not take anything? Some wine and water?—or an eng bearen up?—or—"

"Nothing, Letty," he interrupted, opening his eyes. "Let me be; that's all. I am quite comfortable."

"I hope—I hope you were not asleep! Did I waken you?"

"I was not asleep. Is George Callaway gone?"

"Go, no. He means to stay and watch-in " , wo. He means to stay and watch-in

"W, no. He means to stay and watch-in Christmes Day."

The invalid closed his eyes, and she went back to the other room. He had been buried in thoughts of India. But for this sickness which had overtaken him, he aboutd have been now a married man, for he had engaged himself to a young lady out there. He knew now; he had known it for some two self to his fate, and to make his peace with God.

But there were bitter regrets in his heart yet: and he liked to lie at this, the atill evening hour, and live in memories of the past: though it brought to his spirit a tender aching. How peer earthly interests were growing to appear beside those greater interests that he must soom inevitably enter on! The fret and tear of worldly ambition was over. It had been but folly at the wisest: as he saw and felt now.

His thoughts roamed away to his early life. H's mother—he could remember still how passionately ahe had leved him—had died of the very complaint that had now developed itself in him; ay, and at about the same age too. Save for that one loss—it had occurred when he was old enough to grieve for it—his lot had been a sunny one. Heir to a sufficiently fair estate; had-ome, well-bred; allowed to follow his inclination in wishing to enter the army; rather is—fullered as hor: made much of by his groud dulered as hor: made much of by his groud well-bred; allowed to follow his inclination in wishing to enter the army; rather indulged as a boy; made much of by his proud sisters—yes, it had all been bright. But he was looking back now at the sombre aspects of the past, rather than the bright ones. The friends he had lost, who had gone before him into the land where there shall be no parting, kept coming into his mind one after another. His mother the first. She—

Oft in the stilly night, ere slumber's chair has bound me, Fond memory brings the light of other day around me.

The smiles, the tears of boyhood's years
the words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shose, now dimmed and gonthe cheerful hearts now broken.

the cheerful hearts now broken."

A man's voice had broken into song righ, under the window. It was like a burst of melody. Captain Seaton (you have scarcely failed to recognize the family) raised himself on his elbow, his breath held, his lips parted. Not a word, not a tone lost he.

It was not as tone lost he.

It was not so much that the song had sprung up in strange assimilation with his thoughts; it was not that the voice had in it a low, and, sweet thrill of music: but it was also that the song and the singer brought back to Captain Seaton those bygone days with startling vividness. This song had been a favorite one at home: Robert used to sing it. Why! Robert had sung it, amidst others, the very night before he, Charles Seaton, departed for India. But for its utter improbability, he could have fancied it was his brother singing it now, the tones and manner were so like what Robert's used to be—poor Robert, who had since gone to the dogs. Noither before nor after had he heard anybody sing it as Robert sang it: until now. Hush! the second verse was beginning.

"When I remember all, the friends so linked

"When I remember all, the friends so linked together, I've seen around me fall, like leaves in wintry weather;
I feel like one who treads alone some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled, whose glory's dead, and all but he departed.
Thus in the stilly night ere alumber's chain has bound me, Sad memory brings the light of other days around me."

The melody died away into a pause of tillness. George Callaway, a boy of nine-een, had come to the window to look and listen.

"A nice voice that; sings like a gentle man, not like a street-singer," remarked the young ensign. "Some poor fellow hard-up young ensign. "Some poor fellow hard-up, perhaps."

"Ay," said Captain Seaton, keeping one hand over his eyes; "take him this, George."

The ensign went down with the shilling, and dropped it into the singer's hand—a man in a cape and slouched hat.

"Tank you," was the answer. And the accent was quite a refined one.

"Your voice is that of a gentleman," said the boy impulsively. "It's not like a street-singer's."

inger's."
"Distress makes me de is," returne Robert Seaton, quite as impulsively and more incautiously than the other. "Thank you, again."

Ensige Callaway closed the door behind him, and went upstairs. The singer moved him, and went upstairs. The singer moved off a few steps to she next house, and began another song: "O Bay of Dublia." But the incident had brought his brother Robert all too forcibly to she mind of Captain Seaton. Never a supposition, however, crossed him that it was really Robert: men rarely see a romance when it lies before their faces ready to be picked up. All the sad and tender memories connected with his boyhood's home were dancing through the mind of Captain Seaton. Images passed swifty one into the other. The time that had been; the present days that were now dying, ob very swiftly; the future that he would so soon have entered on to smead in had been; the present days that were having, oh very swifty; the future that he would so soon have entered on to spend in eternity. Never had he felt so sad; never had he realized the truth of the awful responsibility that lay upon him—that must lie upon all who are dying. He thought more, in that one hour, than he had during his whole previous life or through his illness; at least, more to the purpose. The sweet voice of the singer had echoed in his ear, fainter and fainter, until it died away in the distance; it remained to haunt his memory. He had been content to accept the report furnished him, that Robert had mitbehaved himself and was gone to the dogs; but he asked himself now whether some other duty might not lie upon him. Certainly it was an hour fraught with the most earnest reflection to Captais Seston.

A movement at his elbow caused him to most earnest reflection to Captaia Sector.

A movement at his elbow caused him to look up suddenly. His father had approached. The girts and the eneign (they had gone to the dining-room below to feast upon toast and malled wise. To Mr. Seaton's surprise, he saw the eyes, looking up so wistfully, were awimming in tears.

"Why, Castes! Weat's amiss?"

If he was been ablested a considered and allowed the same and deal

"Why, Coarles? Weat's amiss?"

"I—I have been thinking a good deal, ir. Of old times."

sir. Of old times."

"Will you come down stairs? We are going to driek in Christmas—for good luck."
Charles Seaton shook his beed. He knew be should not live to see another; he would not "drink in" this. Mr. Seaton, divining newhat of the refusal, stayed where h was.

"We used always to drink it in at Seaton Farm, Charles. You remember that?"
"Over well, father. it has been present with me to-night amilet other remembrances. You, and the girls, and I, and Robert—little Bobby, that we all so loved."

Mr. Seaton growled at the name.

"Where is he, sir?"

"Where is he | De you suppose I know—or care? When a son turns out as he did, he is not worth looking after."

"What he did—air, I cannot help thinking it—might have been done in the best of good faith," said Captain Seaton.

"Was his obstinate marriage an act of good faith—the marrying of a girl beneath him? Did the giving up of his profession show good faith? He came to me with a a demand—like the Prodigal Son in Scripture—'Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me;' and I gave te him, and east him off. Was the deluding me - since—into risking and losing my thousands—the money that I had been saving up for his sisters' fortunce—done in good faith? Don't talk nonsense, Charles,"concluded the angry gentleman.

"But I want to talk to you, sir."

"But I want to talk to you, sir."

"But I want to talk to you, sir."

"Not about him."

"The Prodigal Bon, when he came home to his father repentant, was welcomed with tears and kisses; with music, and dancing, and rejoicing; they put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet—for he had been lost, and was found. Oh, sir! those parables were spoken that we might learn a lessen from them. I want you to let me find Robert."

"What on earth has put you on to this?" oried Mr. Beaton.

eried Mr. Seaton.

"An hour or two ago, a man was singing.
"An hour or two ago, a man of Robert" "An hour or two ago, a man was singing in the street underneath; one of Robert's songs, 'Oft in the Stilly Night.' But for the absurdity of any such supposition I could have thought it Robert himself, it was so like the voice. It has set me thinking, father;—it seems almost as though it had been a message of reminder sent to me by God. I must see Robert before I die."

Mr. Rester's company on this was some-

God. I must see Robert before I die."

Mr. Seaton's comment on this was something between a growl and a groan.

"Father, don't refuse me. You must let him come to see me if he can be found. I am not asking you now to be reconciled to him; that may take place later—as I have no doubt it will. I must see Robert; I could not, else, die in peace. Why—only think, father—I could not hope to go into Heaven unreconciled to my brother."

"I did not know you had been at war with him," snapped Mr. Seaton.

"But I have tacitly taken up cause against him as though I were, and have not attempted to seek him out."

"He was a willful,—pig-headed—"

The bells of the church hard by clashed out with their joyous chimes, drowning the hard words.

hard words.

"Peace on earth and good will to men!" murmured Charles Beaton as they listened.
"Dear father, I know you will never deny me. Next Christmas Eve, when those bells ring out, I shall not be here."

"I'm sure I don't know where he has got to, or what's become of him," said Mr. Seaton in resentment, when the bells were silent and their eebo had died away.

"I shall have gone on before," resumed Charles, as if continuing what he had last said. "Father, you may be glad of Robert then."

Mr. Seaton growled outright at this; near ly screamed. He be glad of Robert! The world would be more likely to take fire than that come to pass.

"I say I don't know how to find him, or where to look for him. Such a scamp as that, Charles! He may have gone off to Botany Bay,"

"We can advertise," said Captain Seaton.
"Thank God," was his fervent thought. "It will all come right."

Robert Seaton went home with seven abillings and nine-pence half-penny. His singing had been appreciated—and, as was above remarked, hearts open at Christmas time. That is, he carried in one shilling in cash, and goods that represented the rest.

But with the next week began again the carking cars. On the Wednesday, when his head and heart were alike aching, some one showed him an advertisement in the Times newspaper.

showed him an advertisement in the Times newspaper.

"Robert Seaton, Captain Charles Seaton, home from India and very iil, wishes to find his brother Robert, whose present address he does not know. Lose no time."

Robert lost no time. The true address had been appended, and he hastened to it.

Why! It was the very house before which he had sung; whence they had sent him out a shillieg. And—on that sofa—good heavens! it must have been his brother who had lain there. He was lying there now—but oh! with what a changed face, so wan and wasted. His own was wasted. They hardly knew each other.

"Charles!"

"Robert!" With a great cry they were in each other's arms. Old Mr. Seaton (looking on through the not quite closed inner door) protested in a mutter, that Charles was a fool; and in a mutter, that Charles was a fool; and then wondered what was the matter with his own eyes that he had to wipe them.

Need any more be said? A reconciliation took place, and Robert Seaton's troubles were over. With great difficulty—assumed, at any rate—Mr. Seaton was got to believe that Robert had meant good instead of harm in regard to that miserable money, and to condone the past.

"Now I am not going to keep you in idleness, Robert," he said, "but I'll give you an opportunity of earning a living. Foor old Rouse is dead: I've had the news this morning; and if you like to take his place and live in his dwelling-house, why you can. It'll be large enough for you and your family."

family."

Robert Scaton's heart rose up with a seb of gratitude. After all his troubles and privations, the prospect seemed nothing less than Paradise.

"It will all come right in time, Robert," whispered his brother, pressing his hand. "I can see it. You will be the heir when I am gone. My father could not let any but a Seaton snoceed to Seaton Farm."

Charles Seaton wanted to see Anne. Robert brought her with the two elder children, Paul in his new cont. Mr. Seaton was civil, and condescended to shake hands; and the Miss Seatons kissed their brother's wife.

"If a you my grandpapa?" questioned young Mr. Paul, sturdily.
"I believe I am," sail the old gestleman.
"This is my new polisse. Mamma made it. We've got a baby at home. His name's Bob."

"Oh indeed. What's your name?"

Bob."
"Oh indeed. What's your name?"
"Paul. The same as grandp—the same as yours."
What with one thing and another, chiefly perhaps on account of the name, Mr. Seaton took a facey to young Master Paul—and invited him to come again.

ton took a facey to young Master Pani—and invited him to come again.

"I'd net say, Robert, but perhaps you and yours may all spead next Christmas Day with me in the old homestead," cried the old gentleman, opening his heart a lit-tia. "We are going down to live there again. It's not a promise, mind. I shall see how you behave. Charles, you'd like it. But I forgot," he added, his tene chang-ing, his words suddenly out short in their midst. "Oharles—I fear—you may not then he with us."

"No, father, not then. I shall be in a brighter and better homestead than even Seaton Farm."

A correspondent writing from London says: "The most extraordinary machine in the exhibition is, beyond question, the one for microscope writing. Tais enables a person to write in the usual way, and to duplicate his writing a million times smaller, so small, indeed, that it is invisible to the naked eye, yet with a powerful microscope becomes so plain that every line and dot can be seen. The inventor claims that with this instrument he can copy the entire Bible twenty-two times in the space of an inch. The Astor Library, I presume, could be transferred to a sheet of note-paper. Practically, it will be of great service in preventing forgeries. With one of these machines a private mark can be put on bills so minute and perfect that the former can neither perceive nor imitate it, but the bank clerk or broker, knowing where to look, can at once detect that a bill is genuice. The machine is the invention of a Mr. Peters."

A Wise Redeng.

The following story of Horace Greeley is going the rounds of the press:—When he took his famous trip to Lawrence City, Kansas, he stopped for the night at the best hotel in the place, and in due course of time was requested to honor the register with his name. In the act of adorning the page with a specimen of his chirography, a bedbug with a remarkably knowing look about it ran past his hand. The venerable philosopher observed it calmly for a moment, and then, turning to the astonished landiord exclaimed: "Well, I've been bitten by St. Joe flev, bled by Kansas Cuy spiders, dined off by Washington mosquitoes, and interviewed by New York graybacks; but I never was in a place before where the bedbugs looked over the hetel register to find out where my room was."

Swans Singing.

The singing of swams has been supposed to be a fiction; but Jon A. Hjaltalin, an Icelander, writes to Nature that he has often heard them sing in one of the firths of Western Iceland, where hundreds of them congregats. In the morning and evening their singing is so loud that it can be heard miles away, and the mountsins on both sides ring with the echo of it; for each individual seems to join in the chorus. The singing has not the alightest resumblance to the caskling of geese or the quacking of ducks. It is clear and full, and has a metallic ring. The notion that the singing is sweetest just before the swam's death is provalent in Iceland. Their nests are in small inland lakes or tarns, only one pair nesting at a single lake.

The Mahometan loathes the oyster as we do the scorpion or spider, and says of the Cariatian, " He is a dirty dog, for he eats we do the scorpien or spider, and says of the Caristian, "He is a dirty dog, for he eats oysters."

If a man walk in the woods for love of them half of each day, he is in danger of being regarded as a loafer; but if he spends a whole day as a speculator, shearing off those woods and making earth bald before her time, he is esteemed an industrious and enterprising citizen. As if a town had no interest in its forests but to cut them down!—Thereau.

If "Wordsworth," said Charles Lamb, "one day told me that be considered Shakspeare greatly overrated. There is an immensity of trick in all Shakspeare wrete," he said, "and people are takes in by it. I could have written as well as he did, if I had had a mind." So you see (proceeded Charles Lamb, quietly) it was only the mind that was wanting.

If Whoever made it, the remark is true:
"Everything may be forgiven to criticism except personal malice."

If URIQUE IDEA—A colored family by the name of Jones settled in a Lake Erie town early in the war, and as children were born to them they adopted the unique idea of giving each one the name of the hirst vessel that came in port after it was born. The commerchater reports their names as "White Eagle," "Polly," "Jay Cooke," "Tempest," and "Glad Tuinge."

There are two hundred balloon makers in Paris.

The following touching epitaph is to be found on the tombstone of a Culorado deacon: "When circumstances rendered it be found on the tombetone of a Colorado doscon: "When circumstances rendered it deacon: "When circumstances rendered it impossible for him to attend the stated preaching of the gospel, he made it a sacred rule to kuil an Indian every Sabbath."

Coal-gas was regularly used by the Chinese for lighting purposes long before it was known among us.

was known among us.

Z Nisson sold one of her golden locks to an admirer, at a charity fair in New York, for $150. Probably it only coat her about a Carlyle, after emptying his quiver of more satirical arrows than any brother es-saylst, coolly mays; "Barcasm I now see to be, in general, the language of the devil, for which reason I have long since as good as renounced it."

for which reason I have long since as good as renounced it."

The New York Commercial Advertieer says: "The cable of 1806 is stattering badly, and the cable of 1805 has entirely ceased working. Annanias was atruck dead for lying, but the cable is only struck dumb."

The American Naturalist says that it is now generally believed by cruishologists that Andabon's famous species of the Washington eagle was founded on a remarkably large and immature specimen of the baldheaded eagle. The single specimen which he shot in Kentacky, and from which he figured the species, is not in existence.

The should say sincerity, a deep, great, genuine sincerity, is the first charecter intic of all men in any way heroic.—Carlyle.

genuine sincerity, is the new conclusion of all men in any way beroid. — Carlyla,

The Periadelphia boasts sixty-two millionaires.

627 A child while walking through an art gallery with her mother, was astracted by a statue of Minerva. "Who is that?" said she. "My colld, that is Minerva, the goddens of wisdom?" "Why olds a they make her husband, too? "Be cause she had none, my child." "That was because abe was ween, wasn't is mamma?" was the artices reply.

627 A New York politician, in writing a letter of canduleace to the w dow of a "country member," who had been his friends, says, "I am pained to hear that has gone to heaven. We were bound friends, but now we shall never meet again."

-200

Bret Harte, the California humoriet, in an Albanian by hirth, and has tallied thirty-three on the acces of life—a hand-some young fellow, five feet eight, dark complexion, Greeian features, with a hig mean ant so very Greeian, muston-shop whishers, nicely clad, very quiet and unpretending in manner.

There is to be another Atlantic cable, with New York city for its landing place. It will probably be laid next summer.

There is to be another Atlantic cable, with New York city for its landing place. It will probably be laid next summer.

The At Leominster, not leng ago, a strange scene eccurred at a wedding, which really proved no wedding at all. When the clergyman inquired whether any cause existed why the marriage coremony should not be completed, the bridegroom remarked that aix mentine before he asked the lady to release him from his engagement. She declined, and afterwards stated that her father would not consent to its being broken off. He went on to say that coercien had been used to bring him to the coremony, and so he should marry her because he was bound by law to do so. The service was then continued, but when the bride was asked whether she would take this man to be her humband, she replied, emphatically, "No, I will not!" which oansed intense excitament in the chapel. This, of course, brought the service to an abrupt termination. The bride immediately left the chapel, and the bride-groom (who seemed perfectly satisfied with the result) drove away, followed by an immense tumber of persons, who cheered him most heartily.

The A lows paper says: "Don't go back on your newspaper. A subscriber to the Times recently stopped his paper, and the next week was kicked by a horse so severely that his life is despaired of." This should be a solemn warning to all.

The A crany Connecticut farmer has just finished a two thousand dollar hog-pen, which is grained and papered.

The The worst way to improve the world is to condemn it.—Fostus.

ways full.

The worst way to improve the world is to condemn is.—Fostus.

There are Mr. Hale's definitions of Faith, Hope, and Love, as given in his hopeful little story, "Ten Times One is Ten."

Are they not worth remembering?

"To look up, and not down;
To look forward, and not back;
To look out, and not in; and To lend a hand."

To lanu a same.

To lanu a same.

To lanu a same.

A beautiful girl in New Jersey postponed her wedding day two weeks, because she wasn't going to be married with her face all speckled with mosquito bites.

There traders of Missouri put a little oil of vitriol on the animal's hoof to make him show off his uncontrollable spirit.

There was the same and the speckles proposes to lecture in Washington against woman suffrage.

frage.

A couple in Newport, R. I., recently celebrated their pearl wedding, having been married 70 years.

A ha sore of land has been sold in the city of London for $3,600,000.

Wittier than Whittier:—

"Of all the sad words of tongue or pen, The saddest are these, we must have Ben!"

LT A man we have heard of is so short bat when he is ill he don't know whether he has headache or corns.

The Pil Shu is the name of one of the oldest of the Chinese delties. His name got mixed in coming across.

The weakness is more opposite to virtue than vice itself.—Rochfoucault.

The music teacher who broke his engagement is called "a tuneful lyre."

Rates of Advertising.

Thirty cents a line for the first insertion. Twenty cents for each additional insertion Payment is required in advance.

Inventor of the colchrated GOSSAMER VENTIL LATING WIG and ELASTIC BAND TOUPACES. ns to smable Ladles and Gentlemen to

For Wigs, Inches,
0.1.—The round of the head.
2.—Frum forehead out the head to neck.
2.—From ear to ear over the top.
4.—Frum ear to ear of the head.
4.—Frum ear to ear of the head.
4.—Frum ear to ear of the head.
4.—Frum ear to ear of the head. " 4-From ear to ear round the forehead.

He has always ready for sale a spiendid stock of Gepts' Wigs, Toupees, Ladies' Wigs, Half Wigs. Frizets, Braids, Curis, &c., beautifully manutatured, and as chesp as any establishment in the Union. Letters from any part of the world will re-

Private rooms for Dycing Ladies' and Gentlemen's

SAPOLIO

Ils BETTER and CHEAPER than SGAP. Does its work quickly, easily, and with less labor than any other compound; cleans windows without water; removes stains from wood, marble and sions; cleans and brightens kniers and table ware; for general house cleaning is unequalled; polinhed in, brass, iron, copper and steel; removes oil, rust and dist from machinery; removes stains from the hand which soup will not take of, &c. floid at all Groomy, Drug and Hotton Stores. Wholeand, 211 Washington St., New York, jy23-cowif 30 Oxford St., London.

$100 to 250 PER MONTH GUA manbitions men and women refiling our world renowned Patent Silver Mould White Wire Clothes Bulness permanent. For full particulars, address Grand Wirs Mills, Philadelphia, Fa.

TOW TO BEHAVE.—"A Handbook of Sti.

I queste, and Guide to True Politeness," ISc.;
"The Model Latter-Writer." ISc.; "How to Tail and Debana, "ISc.; "The Art of Vestriiquism, with instructions for Making the Magic Whetle," ISc.;
"Coursely and Margage," ISc. Mailed. Address
E. THORFTON, Hoboken, New Jossey.

BUCHU.

[From Dispensatory of the United States.]

Diosma Cronata-Buchu Leaves.

sewhat aromatic, their taste bitterich, and anale are gently stimulant, with a potuliar tendency to the Urinary Organa.

occurred in its evacuation. The remedy has also een recommended in Dyspepsia, Chronic Rhoums tism, Cutaneous Affections, and Dropsy.

OLD'S EXTRACT BUCKU is used by person from the ages of 18 to 25, and from 25 to 25, or in the section or change of life; after Confinement, or Labor Pains.

In affections peculiar to females, the Extract Buthu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chioosis, or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulners or Supression of the Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous State of the Uterns, Loncorrhon, or

AND DESCRIPTION SWELLINGS,-This medicine in rbents into healthy action, by which the Watery

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU has cured every case f Diabetes in which it has been given. Irritation of the Neck of the Bladder, and Inflammation of tone in the Bladder, Calculus, Gravel, Brick-Dus anded with the following symptoms; Indisposi Pain in the Back, Hot Hands, Pinshing of the Body Dryness of the Skin, Eruption on the Face, Pallie Countenance, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular HELMBOLD'S RYBACT BUCHU Is Diuretie and Blood-Purifying, and cures all diseases arising from habits of dissipation, excesses and imprudes life, impurities of the Blood, &c., in these diseases and in connection with HELEBOLD's ROSE WASE.

Sold by all Druggists and dealers everywhere. Beears of counterfeits. Ask for Reimbold's. Take no other. Purcu-$1.25 per bottle, or six bottles for $6.50. Delivered to any address. Describe symp-

H. T. HELMBOLD,

894 Breadway, New York.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS DONE UP IN

H. T. HELMBOLD.

AT EVERYBORT KNOW IT!

THAT THERE IS NOW IN PROGRESS

WANAMAKER & BROWN'S

OAK HALL, MOST STUPENDOUS SALE

FINE READY-MADE

CLOTHING THOUSANDS OF OVERCOATS,

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF OTHER GARMEST

BOTH MEN AND BOYS,

ARE BEING SOLD AT A Positive Sacrifice!

THE GREATEST BARGAINS WE HAVE EVEN OPPERED ARE NOW BEING TAKEN UP. WHOLE SUIT FOR WHAT THE COAT ALONS COSTS ORDINARILY. AN OVERCOAT AND SUIT FOR WHAT THE SUIT ALONE WOULD COST. TWO BOYS' SUITS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE PURNISHING GOODS AT A DISCOURT BELOW THE LOWIST PRICES. THIS WORK MUST GO ON

Our Stock is Reduced, AND WE ARE IN GOOD SHAPE TO REGIN OUR SPRING PURCHASES AND MANUFACTURES.

MAKE YOUR SELECTIONS, AND THE PRICES WILL BE

PIXED TO YOUR OWN SATISFACTION. Wanamaker

Brown's.

Market and Sixth Sts., Phila. I NOTE.

By our system of Solf-Measurement, easily understood, we enable outdomers to send their orders in such a way as to SECURE AS GOOD FIT as though they came themselves to our Establishment. Our Improved Ruise for Solf-Measurement, Samples, and Prion sent when requested, and PROMITE ATTENTION gives to all orders, with GUARANTES of estire satisfaction.

Celebrated Murray

Lanman's Florida Water.

The most lasting, agreeable, and refreshing of all perfumes, for use on the Handkerchief, at the Toilet. and in the Bath. For sale by all Druggists and Perfumers.

WINCHESTER & CO. Gentlemen's Furnishing Store,

Patent Shoulder-Seam Shirt Manufactory, No. 706 CHESTRUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

FORMULA FOR MEASUREMENT,

Size around the Neck:
Size around the Chest
under the Arms:
Size around the Waist:
Size around tag Wrist:
deel-56

Length of Arms (bent) from the custre of back to indide of hand;
Length of Rosom:
Length of Relation (bent)

$240 PER MONTH Rasily made by agents. For circulars, address PARR, ROBINSON & CO., Jackson, Micalgan. dec17-12:

10 GALLATES OF WHINE F.Y POR 91.
Instructions is cents. Address BiRD, Post Depost, Maryland.

DEVOLVERS AT COST (Half's six-shooter) Nest, durable ecapone; inch barrel. Sent, post padd, for $1.50. A. GEORGE, box 282 Springfield.

Dookin, Carlon, Parlvyn, Music, News, De Mouleai, Legal and all other books are malled prepaid to any address by HUNTER & Co. Electain, N. H. Resabilshed 1860. Send for estalogues, &c., Sequence, Security of the Carlon, and sore move, We supply all Gamee, Plays, Photographs, &c., &c. Prympl aces and satisfaction guaranteed. Address HUNTER & CO., Publishers, Hinedals, N. H.

COLDI GOLDI-WY GULDEN COMPOUND (Will force the beard to grow on the emoothest face, or hair on the bailotes head, thick and heary, in every case, in 21 days, or money refunded. Sent by mail, postage paid, for 80 conte a package, or 2 for 91. Address M. A. 544GERB, Calboto, in.

otherwise.
The america of Suspense, Physicians, and all per-tone interested, is meet respectfully solicited.
The web-known LINCOLY ARK is also made solely by this Commany, This Arm has the pa-tronage of the U. S. GUYERHERY. To avoid the imposition of PIRATICAL COPY 1879, apply only to lim, PALMER, so shows directed novi-if

Now to the Proper Time to take Cleansing Medicines to PURIFY YOUR BLOOD. The most Pleasant and Efficient is WAIM'S CELEBRATED PANACEA.

SWAIM'S CELEBRATED PANACEA, POR THE CURE OF SCROPULA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION, GENERAL DEBILITY, WRITE SWELLING, RHSUMATISM, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, ALL DISEASES ARISING PROM IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD AND THE SECONDARY SYMPTOMS FOR WHICH MERCURY IS USUALLY PRESCRIBED.

Swatm's Panases has been for fifty years only rais in this country and in Europe for his extraordinate overse, for the outification of which refurepe is made to the directions and books (which may be he gratis) accompaging the Panasecs, some of which ye the particulars of coos los frightful for greater others. The wonderful curve effected by SWAIM'S PANA-CEA have for many years made for it an invaluable crewedy. The Peacess does not contain mercury in any form, and, being an innocent properation, it may be given to the most tender infant. If persons purchasing the Panaces will be careful to abserve that the name SWAIM is correctly spai-led, they need not be imposed on. Also valuable Family Medicine, being a highly approved mody for all diseases arising from debility of the ignority organs, such as activity of the stomach serms, cholera morbus, dysestery, fover and agos isoding piles, etch headcahe, &c. dee the pomph at (which may be had gratis' scoompanying the Ver orage.

Proposed only at SWAIM'S LABORATORY, the id Stand, South Seventh Street, below Chestaut, hiladelphia, and sold by all druggists in the United Haies.

General Agents for the United States,
W. H. SCHIMPPELIN & CO.,
octis-14t
170 William st., New York

THE BEST HOLIDAY GIFT

FOR

BOYS AND GIRLS.

Enlarged, Improved, Illustrated, TWO MONTHS

FREE! FREE! The Most Popular Juvenile Magazine in America.

LITTLE CORPORAL

MAGAZINE.

Entirely Original and First Class.

All new subscribers for TER LITTLE CORPORAL for the new year, whose names and money are sent in during November and December, will receive the Rovember and December numbers of May PREES TER LITTLE CORPORAL has a larger circulation than any other Juvestle Magazine in the world, and is better worth the price than any other magazine-mbilished.

ONE DOLLAR AND A HALF year: $7.50 for six copies; single copy is cents, or on to any one who will try to raise a club. Benuti ms for Clubs. NOW. Back numbers can always be sent. Address SEWELL & MILLER, LITTLE CORPORAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, BOY26-54 Chicago, Ill.

MAGSC EGGS.-Hig profits to spents. Addres R. THOMAS, 830 Washington Mt., Brooklys New York.

$1.000 REWARD.

For any case of Blad, Bleeding, Itching or Ulcerated Flee that Be Bing's Fife Bomedy Yalis to care. R is prepared expressly to care the F-isa and nothing the. 5th has cared cases of over 30 years transing. Bold by all Drugglets. Price $1.00. LABORATORY—162 Franklin Mt., Baltimore, Md. doc.10-1y

E The Spring Course of Lectures commence Jan L. The Spring Course of Locustee community, 1871. Fees for the course $20. For particular address JONEPH SITES, M. D., Dean, $15 Pm St., Philadelphia. deel?-St

RUPTURE

Curred by Dr. Sherman's Paivnt Appliance and Supriare Curative, without the Injury experienced from the use of trasees. Famphiets illustrating bases cases of Rupture, before and after cure, with other information of interest to the ruptured, mailed on reactive of sen ets. Address Dr. J. A. SHENKIAN, decide cores.

VINEGAR, CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF THE PART

Husband's Calcined Magnesia

is frue from unpleasent have, and thrue times the strength of the common Cabridged Ragment.

The World's Pair Medial and four First Fromtum Silver Medials have been considered it, as being the best in the market. For each by the deraggiest and country steamberson, and it the market. For each by the deraggiest and country steamberson, and it the market. For each by the deraggiest and country steamberson, and it the market.

THOMAS J. BUNNAND, W. corner existent. Third and Sprace Sta., Philadelphia.

Agents! Read This!

We will pay agents a salary of 600 per week and expense, or allow a long commission, to sell our new and wenderful leveltions. Address E. WAGRER & CO., Earshall, Mich. cottl-18

CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS AND ARTHMA CAN BE CURED BY MEDICATED INNALATIONS.

The mode is so simple a child can use it: the rinciples strictly secord with physiological laws; tessels, subnounded success. See the second war can star for Exercoss, Caruss, and mayman, by J. M. COMIRS, M. D., Frof, of Observices and Discovers of Women and hildren in the Ecicle Medical Cottege of New York, oci. Im 148 E., Socia St., Now York.

20 mix drinks. Address BIRD, Port Deposit,

PEMPETUAL ALMANAC.—Metal, siss ei 5 cont coin. Sample 56 cts. Circulars fros. W. D. ALLEN, itoz 1784, Philadelphia Pa. cetô bu

CONFESSIONS OF AN INVALLED. Published for the benefit of Youne Mm who suffer from Mervess Debitity, etc.; sho a Guinanou for the nervous of both sures young and old; sack work supplying the means of self-cure. Written by one who cared himself, and set free on receiving a post-paid directed anvelope.

Address MATHANIEL MAYPAIR, dec6-4t Brooklys, New York.

G RAT INVENTION, — conting new.—
T Every cirk and student wants it. Bont for 50 cants. I we $1. Address Box 63, Glenwood, Mo.

$75 PER WHEN couly made by Agents.—

50 PROTEIRES, "Valuable Recipes," and Box 74, "Station A," New York city. dcc3-13t

CERAN POSTAGE AND REVENUE STAMPS takes in exchange for Goods. Address S. POX & CO., New York city.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE LIGHT THE WORLD

Containing Fleetwood's "Life of Christ," and "Lives of the Aposties, Evangelies and Martyrs," Dediridge's "Evidences of Christianity," "History of the Jews," by Josephus: "A History of all Reiglous Daposnizations," with treatizes and tables relating to events connected with Bible History containing many fine engravings. The whole forming a or piete treasury of Christian knowledge. press measury of Christian knowledge. PLINT. octi-3m No. 96 South Seventh St., Philadelphia.

825 A WEEK SALARY And 10 per cent, commission paid to first-class, active, pushing marraeding agents. For particulars address E. THORNTON, Hobokon, New Jersey, novi6-6m.

VICK'S

FLORAL GUIDE

For 1871.

THE PIRSTEDITION OF ONE HUNDERD AND PIFTY THOUSAND cooles of Vick.'s Historized Containings of Seeds and Fromi timide, to published and ready to send est—100 pages, and as hapraving of almost every cestraine Flower and Vegetable. It is elecantly printed on fine tinted paper, illustrated with Three limited flac Wood Engistings and I was beautiful

COLORED PLATES.

The most beautiful and the most instructive Floral Guide published. A $6.88.50 AN SEMSTSON published, in all other respects similar to the English. Sent tree to all my customers of 1876, as rapidly as possible, without application. Sent to all others who order them for Tem Comes, which is not half the cost. Address.

Back-ster, New York.

I NETANTANEAUS BEEF and Sound Refreshing Steep guaranteed to any one afflicted with Asthma by aring my "fastest Relief for Asthma." It acts insteadily and consider, relieving the percuryen immediately and consider from the olivane backets rears, but now suffer no longer, and week medically and considering the patient of the document of the suffer of

FREE TO BOOK AGENTS.

We will send a handrome Prospectus of our New Illustrated Family Bible contribing over 300 fine Scripture II natrations to any Book Agent, free of change. Address National Punassume Co., Phila. Pa. denie-ti Pit and Humor.

Mark Twasn's Was-b.

My beautiful new watch had run eighteen masths without losing or gaining, and without breaking any part of its machinery or stopping. I had come to believe it infallible in its judgments about the time of day, and to consider its constitution and its automy imperiabable. But at last, one night, I let it run down. I grieved about it as if it were a recognized measunger and forerunner of calamity. But by and-by I cherred up, set the watch by guess, and commanded my bodings and superstitions to depart.

the watch by guess, and a mmanded my bedings and superstitions to depart.

Next day I stepped toto the chief jeweller's to set it by the exact time, and the head of the establishment took it out of my hand and proceeded to set it for me. Then he said, "She is four minutes rlow—regulator wants pushing up." I tried to stop him—tried to make him understand that the watch kept perfect time. But no; all this human cabbage could see was that the watch was four minutes slow, and the regulator must be pushed up a little; and so, while I danced around him in anguish and beseeched him to let the watch alone, he calmly and oruelly did the shameful deed. did the shameful deed did the shameful deed.

My watch began to gain. It gained faster and faster day by day. Within the week it sickened to a raging fever, and its pulse went up to a hundred and fifty in the shade. At the end of two months it had left all the timepicces of the town far in the rear, and was a fraction over thirteen days abead of the almana. It was away into November, on joying the anow, while the October leaves were still turning. It burried up housernt, bills payable, and such things, in such a ruinous way that I could not abide it.

I took it to the watchmaker to be regulated. He asked me if I had ever had it repaired. I said no, it had never needed any lated. He asked me if I had ever had it repaired. I said no, it had never needed any repairing. He looked a look of victous happiness, and eagerly pried the watch epen, then put a small dice-box into his eye and peered into its machinery. He said it wanted cleaning and ciling, besides regulating—come in a week.

After being cleaned and ciling her regulated, my watch slowed down to that degree that it ticked like a tolling bell. I began to be left by traine; I failed all appointments; I got to missing my dinner; my watch strung out three days grace to four, and let me go to protest; I guadaily drifted bank into out three days grace to four, and let me go be protest; I gradually diffeed bank into yesterday, then day before, then into last week, and by-and-by the comprehension came upon me that all rolltary and alone I was lingering along in week before last, and the world was out of sight. I seemed to detect in myself a sort of sneaking fellow-feeling for the mummy in the Museum, and a desire to awar news with his feeling for the mummy in the Museum, and a desire to awap news with him.

I went to a watchmaker again. He took the watch all to pieces while I waited, and then said the barrel was "swelled." He said he could reduce it in three days. After this, the watch averaged well, but nothing more. For half a day it would go like very mischief, and keep up such a barking and wheezing and whooping and anexing and anorting that I could not hear myself think for the disturbance; and as long as it held out, there was not a watch in the land that stood any chance against it. But the rest stood any chance against it. But the rest of the day it would keep on slowing down and fooling ustil all the clocks it had lett behind caught up again. So at last, at the end of twenty-four hours, it would trot up to the judges all right and just on time. It would show a fair and square average, and ne man could say that is did more or less than its duty.

ne man could say that it did more or less than in duty.
But a borrect average is only a mild virtue in a watch, and I took this instrument to another watchmaker. He said the kingbolt was broken. I said I was glad it was nothing more serious. To tell the plain truth, I had no idea what the kingbolt was, but I did not choose to appear ignorant to a stranger. He repaired the kingbolt, but what the watch gained in one way it lost in another. It would run a while and then stop awhile, and then run awhile again, and so on, using its own discretion about the intervals. And every time it went off it kicked And every time it went off it kicked vals. And every time it went off it kicked back like a musket.

I padded my breast for a few days, but finally took the watch to another watch-maker. He picked it all to pieces, and turned the ruin over and over under his glass; and then he said there appeared to be something the matter with the hair-trigger. He fixed it, and gave it a fresh sizt. It did well now, except that always at ten minutes to tan the hand would shut together like a pair of seiseors, and from that time forth they would travel together.

The eldest man in the world could not make head or tail of the time of day by such

The eldest man in the world could not make head or tail of the time of day by such a watch, and so I went again to have the thing repaired. This person said that the crystal had got bent, and that the mainspring was not straight. He siso remarked that part of the works needed half-soling. He made these things all right, and then my time piece performed maxor princally. my timepiece performed unexceptionably, save that now and then, after working along quietly for nearly eight hours, everything inside would let go all of a andden and begin to busz like a bee, and the hands would

"GAME" IN THE HIGHLANDS.

CAPTAIN JINES .- " Birds plent ful, I lope, Donald?"

CAPTAIN J.—"Tousens, sir—in tousaus."

CAPTAIN J.—"Any Zebras?"

Danald (anxious to please).—"Le't Zebras? They're in tousaus, too."

CAPTAIN J.—"And Goriffus, as doubt?"

DONALD.—"Weel, noo an' then we see ane or twa—just like yersel"."

Not so Bad on That.

It is no sin not to be well up in the classics. 'Liakim Dutton was not. But he loved the American fair. In fact, he loved two of them. Those two felt emotions of love toward 'Liakim. And they quarrelled about him like two Kilkenny pussics. Consequence was, all three were brought into court' 'Liakim, being the cause of the struggle, was thus addressed by his honor: "And so those women were lighting about you?" you!

you?"
"I believe so, sir."
"You are a sort of Adonis, then?"
"Sir?" inquired 'Liakim, his eyes pro-truding, and a shade of pellor creeping into

"You are an Adonis," the court repeated,
"Oh no, sir—never as bad as that; but I'ee been in the pentlentiary for stealing horses."

Interference,

A dignified drunkard dwells at Bellows Falls, Vt. He is an old Indian, known as "Dr. John," who would be smart, save for his love of liquor. As he was tacking along the sidewalk, he made a mis-step, plunged into an opening, and stuck there, with nothing but his feet wisble above the bricks. A person who saw him fall ran to his sid, and pulled him ent. As soon as the "doctor" was on his feet, he braced himself against a hitching-post, and said:
"G'long now. Can't yer mind yer business? What have I done that you should abuse me this way?"
The individual explained, by saying that he wished to help the doctor out of trouble.

he wished to help the doctor out of

he wished to help the doctor out of trouble.
Whereat John replied
"Spect you think that's mighty big talk!
Next time I stoop down to pick up my hat out o' that hole, want ye just to keep yer bands off, that's all!"

THE FIRST AND LAST KIRS.

Thy lips are quiet and thine eyes are still. Cold, colories and sad thy placid face, Thy form has now only the statue's grace; My words wake not thy voice, nor can they Thine cyes with light. Before fate's mighty I sit with thee and Death in this lone place, And hold thy hands that are so white au chill.

I always loved thee, which thou did'st not thou west; Now thou art dead, I may raise up the fold That hides thy face, and by thee, bending low,

For the first time and last before we part,
Kiss the curved hps—calm, beautiful and cold.

Suggestions for the Christmas Becara-tion of Churches.

A very easy and effective plan of making letters for a text is to cut them out in card-board and cover them with red flannel, gummed or tacked on. A row of box-leaves,

A THY SAY and effective plan of making fast that their individuality was lost completely, and they simply seemed a delicate when with red fasted on. A row of horizontal their individuality was lost completely, and they simply seemed a delicate when with red fasted on. A row of horizontal the work of the same true has been seen to be an additional to the same true white a loss of the proposal state of the same true was the same true white a loss of the proposal true to the same true white a loss of the proposal true to the same true was the same true white a loss of the proposal true to the same true white a loss of the proposal true to the same true was the same true white a loss of the proposal true the same true white a loss of the proposal true the same true was the same true white the same true white loss of the same true whit

The following is the best method of making rice letters: You require several stones of rice if any great quantity of letters are required; paste made with flour and water, and liquid blue; white pains. Cut your letters the size required in wood or very thick eardbears. You must take a quantity of the rice in an earthen pan, make a thorough pudding of it with the glue and paste, then lay a layer upon your letter, leave it to dry, put on another layer of rice in the same way; this is done several times, until the letter is quite an inch thick throughout! Crosses, monograms, are required thicker and higher in the centre. When made the necessary thickness, you cover all imperfections in color made by the glue and paste with a thin coating of white paint. Letters and designs made in cotton wool are not so much trouble, but they do not last so long as the rice; for these you lay the wool on the card and wind round it with fine cotton, but so lightly that it does not destroy the shape. They are not so effective as the rice letters.—M. E. S.

We made lilles in two ways; I will describe the heat and most alphorate first. These way letters.—M. E. S.

We made lilies in two ways; I will describe the best and most elaborate first. These we put in the more conspicuous pesitions on a level with the eye. The large white lilies consist, you know, of six petals, arranged in two circles of three, placed one above the other, so that one of the upper petals complex the space between two of the lower ones. They have six stamens and one pistil. We made our petals two and a half inches deep, and one and a half wide at the widest part, vis. towards the centre. Everybody we made our petsis two and a hair inches dasp, and one and a haif wide at the widest part, vis., towards the centre. Everybody knows the shape of a fily petal; it tapers to a point at both ends. We took a piece of white covered wire, and formed it into the shape of the petal, and then put a thick white thread down the centre, from top to bottom. Then we passed a long needleful of white single German wool over the wire, and under the thread in the middle, over the wire again, over the thread from the back, and then over the wire again, so weaving the wool is and out till the wire was completely covered. The edges were of course by this means covered with wool, which seemed to interlace in the centre. Over the thread down this centre we put a couple of threads of white flowelle silk, sewing it at the tip. We had only to bend the petals into the required corved form, and arrange them as I have described round the wire stem, to which we first attached the six stamens and pistils. The stamens were made by covering a piece of wire ball an inch will an inch will sainly a mice. pistils. The stamess were made by covering a piece of wire balf an inch wile with amber culored wool, and assembling them horizontally know.
Though well he knew whose wedded love ed with white wool, an isch and a half long. The pistil was made by covering the tops of three pieces of doubled wire with green wool, so as to make three white-green balls; these were bound together en another strip of wire, three inches long and covered with white wool; this night was placed in the white wool; this pistif was placed in the centre of the stamens surrounded by the white wool; this pied! was placed in the centre of the stamens surrounded by the petals, beneath which some green weol bound tightly round will hide all imperfactions. In a corations they really look very beautiful. For church decombions I have seen five of these lilies arranged on a stem, one above the other, after the manner in which they grow, with a bud at the top. The bud consists of three petals made in exactly a similar way to the others, save that they are only an inch and a half in length, and half an inch wide at the broadest; they are seem together at the top. The stem is covered with green paper, and at the back of each lily is a kind of leaf of this light-colored brown paper, and fine long narrow artificial leaves are clustered together at the buttom. The other way in which we made these lities was to cut out the petals in thick white cartridge paper, and attach these to the wool-covered stamens and pistile, having first marked a centre line down the middle of each petal with a bone kaitting-needle.

AGRICULTURAL.

Boantifying the Neeks and Corners.
A little book has recently appeared in England which has given us much pleasure.
The book is called the "Wild Garden," and Engiand which has given us muon pleasure. The book is called the "Wild Garden," and its author is Mr. W. Robinson. The object of the author is to show the English people what a large number of garden plants, usually supposed to require careful cultivation, will, if planted out and neglected, take care of themselves, and go on and flourish from year to year—in short, become perfectly naturalized. He proposes that plants of this hardy nature should be planted in such nooks and corners as almost every large place presents, and thus form what he calls his "wild garden," where instead of weeds the place shall be filled with pleasing flowers, growing in a natural way. The idea is a happy one, and quite as practicable with us as in England. There is scarcely a farmer's wife who does not long for a garden, while but few of them are able to command the means and time to keep one is proper order. A neglected garden is a source of pain rather than pleasure, but if she could have a wild garden, where one of its merits was its freeden. than pleasure, but it she could have a will garden, where one of its merits was its freedom from care, it would allow many a one to enjoy flowers who might otherwise be deprived of this pleasure. Upon almost every place there is a spot exactly adapted to a wild garden. If it is so rocky that it has been left untouched, all the better. Hardy bulbs such as a nowdrone, tuling crohas been left untouched, all the better. Hardy bulbs, such as snowdrops, tulips, crocuses, hyacinths, daffoills, and others, do quite as well year after year. Almost any of the well-known border plants that are to be found in old gardens are suited to the wild garden; the Columbiase, Larkspurs, Moss Pink, Primrose, Paonies, Perenniai Puloxes, and a host of others. Some of our pare aftenties matica plants would of course rolloxes, and a nost of others. Some of our more attractive mative plants would of course find a place here, and the late-flowering Corysanthemums also. We can readily set that a wild garden can be made to the real lover of flowers a source of daily pleasure, from the time the first crocus pushes in early spring until frost has destroyed the last Carysanthemum.—American Agriculturist.

Does Tobacco Exhaust Soil?

There is a general impression that the tobacco plant is a great exhauster of the soil. We supposed so ourselves one time. We have never raised it to any extent on our own grounds; but a neighbor grew acres every year, and nothing else. It was his business, and ho rented every spare acre any one would let him have. Year after year the same crop was grown in the simeland, though annually manured; and now that death has made changes, and the land used for regular farm purposes. as good crops are death has made changes, as good crops are for regular farm purposes, as good crops are raised on these lands as any that never had a tobacco plant on them. We now believe a tobacco plant on them. We now believe it is not the exhausting crop we once thought it was, and feel very much like indorsing the following bit of correspondence we find in the Boston Cultivator:

"In 1868, I took a good crop of tobacco from a piece of land, containing one and a-balf acre—the exact amount I cannot tell, as it was housed and stripped with other lots which I had. In the month of September sowed to white wheat, and harvested thirty-nine and a-quarter bushels of clean, good wheat. And now, on June 230. I have taken off feur large two-horse loads of lay from this one and a-quarter acre, the rest of it having been fed to my cows. Some portions were bidly lodged, and lay so flat that even the mowing-machine did not get near all of it. I expect to get as much or more the next crop. The quantity of tobaca-half acre-the exact amount I cannot tell. more the next crop. The quantity of tobac-co grown on this piece must have been as much as 2,600 pounds, and was sold for twenty-five cents through. In about four years I shall go over the same rotation again -i. e., tobacco twice, then wheat, and seed own, and mow again.—Thomas Mechan, in

The Thistle Pest. We have seen so much of this great enemy of the farmer when it is allowed to get a foothold, that we feel impelled to allude to it frequently. We say allowed, because it cannot get a foothold where a farm is free of it except it has permission to do so from the occupier of the land. It usually visits him in purchased seeds, or it may steal over his lines from the lands of a careless neighbor; but in either event it is easy to dispatch it if taken in time, and the farmer who neglects to take it in time and destroy it root and branch, is disqualified to be the tiller of the soil, and besides commits an offence against the law, and the community which the law is intended to protect. Where only a few thistles make their appearance, only a few thistles make their appearance, as they commonly do in patches, they should be totally removed, not a piece of root the size of a floger-nail should be left or it will produce a shout. Where they suddenly ap-pear in large numbers they should be cut off close to the ground, and just before a rain the hellows in the stalks should be filled with common sait. One dose this way is enough. But should they exist in still larger numbers, outting down with the reythe as fast as they appear, and frequent cultivation of the ground, will exterminate them.— Germantown Telegraph.

We think there has been less progress in the last teresty-five years in the last teresty-five years in the last many other occupation that can be named. We mean by the great many men who can nail on a shee fast, and a few who can kine it as it should be, but the great mans of horse-abours have failed to learn the first principles of their compation. Few understand thoroughly the austomy of the horse's foot. The great mistake is made in attempting to trim the hoof to fit the shoe, whereas the shoe should be made to fit the shoe is made right. The "frog" should never be touched by the butters, if the foot is bealthy, as nature has intended that to be the upring or cushion to first receive the blow when the foot is set down on the road, to guard the knee and shoulder from the concussion.

to guard the knee and shoulder from the concussion.

The outside of the hoof ought not to be touched by the rasp, save at the very edge, as rasping tends to thicken the hoof and make it coerse and clumay. Shoes should be made as light as they possibly can be to answer the purpose. Ordinarily they are one-third too heavy. A horse's hoof should be carefully cleaned every day, and ofling the hoof once or twice a week is recommended. If veterinary surgeons wish to confer a real and lasting benefit upon society, let them open schools to teach the art of horse-shoeing.—Kansas Farmer.

THE RIDDLES.

Miscellaneous Enigmo.

I am composed of 44 letters, My 5, 9, 14, 21, 4, 41, is a river in Asia

My 5, 9, 14, 21, 4, 41, is a river in Asia Minor.

My 40, 38, 7, 30, 17, 22, 36, is a character in the Arabian Nights.

My 41, 35, 16, 5, 7, 10, is the chief ruler of the Turks.

My 28, 32, 48, 25, 23, 18, 5, 7, 86, is an Oriental religion.

My 27, 35, 88, 10, 7, 83, 13, 29, 26, 5, 13, 13, 8, 24, 40, is a female character in the Arabian Nights.

My 20, 13, 3, 41, 38, 7, is a country in Asia.

My 41, 24, 8, 33, 23, 13, is an oily grain which graws wild in the East.

My 42, 40, 16, 4, 20, 12, is a title given to the succe-sors of Mabomet.

My 1, 7, 5, 4, 23, 33, is a female character in the story of Aladdio.

My 27, 13, 10, 9, 18, is a kind of imaginary being.

being.

My 42, 7, 9, 8, 3, is a city on the Nile.

My 20, 13, 33, 44, is a sort of a fairy in Persian mythology. My 13, 35, 20, 43, 39, 40, 5, 24, 8, is a river in Asia.

in Asia.

My whole is a quotation from Tennyson.

OMAR.

Enigma.

Lam composed of 22 letters,

My 1, 8, 7, 4, 22, 11, is worthy of trust, My 8, 5, 18, 12, is an intransitive verb. My 19, 20, 15, 16, 10, 8, 9, is a small dag-

My 21, 14, 13, 3, 17, 6, 2, is a numeral adjective.

My whole at present you do see,
What then, my good friends, can I be?
Honeytown, Ind.
PHILIP.

Biophantine Problem

241 times the square of a certain integral number, plus 75 times the number, plus 7 is a square number. Required—The num-

Send answers to "Post," solutions to ARTEMAS MARTIN.

McKean, Brie Co., Pa.

Conundrums.

Conumerations.

When it's a drawing.

When it's a drawing.

When it's a drawing.

When does Shakspeare give an instance of the cure of consumption? Ans.—When the Duke of Gloucester stops King Henry's coffin (coughing.)

Why is the letter Y like a prodigal son? Ans.—Because it makes pa pay!

If a meroenary man were to sak a girl to marry, what flower would he name?

Ans.—Any money? (anemone.)

Ans.—Any money? (anemone.)

Why should you always choose white cows? Ans.—Because it is of ne use milking those that are dun before you begin!

Why is a worn-out shoe like ancient Greese? Ans.—Because it once had a Solon taswers to Last. MISCELLANEOUS ENIGMA-"The roys of Happine's, like those of light, are color-less when unbroken." CHARADE—(Ball,) (Sam,) Balsam.

(cole on.)

What are the best astronomere?

Ans.—Stars, because they have studded (ctudied) the heavens since the creation.

RECEIPTS.